The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph, and from eye observations.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard, Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground. Rainfall reported on any day is for 24 hours preceding 8 A.M. of that day.

o, overcast; g, gloomy; d, drizzling rain; p, passing temporary showers; t, thunder; ⚡, lightning, ⚡, strong wind.

No. 35.—Notification.—It is hereby notified for general information [as required by section XII of Act V (B C.) of 1864] that the Hon'ble the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal proposes, under the provisions of section XI of the same Act, to make the following rules in regard to the Madaripur bhil channel, as defined in this Department Notification No. 128, dated the 26th June 1900 :—

1. Every vessel passing through the bhil channel shall stop at the prescribed toll station, as notified in the schedule of tolls for the purpose of determining the tolls payable.

2. For the purposes of these rules, vessels other than rafts, timbers, bamboos or other floating material shall be divided into two classes as below :—

Class I.—To include all vessels of the usual native types of build.

„ II.—To include all steamers, flats and barges, and such other square built boats as should, in the opinion of the Collector of tolls, be included.

3. The net tonnage of every vessel of class I, whether laden or empty, shall, for the purposes of these rules, be determined by the following measurements:—

A.—The product of half the length of the vessel from stem to stern, measured along the water-line, multiplied by the interior greatest breadth of the vessel, multiplied by the depth from the water-line to the bottom of the vessel, is to be taken as equal to the number of maunds upon which toll shall be levied.

B.—The measurement of the length is to be made in feet, rejecting inches; the measurement of the breadth and depth is to be made in feet and quarters of a foot, rejecting portions of less than a quarter of a foot.

C.—The maundage on which tollage shall be charged shall be a simple multiple of 12½ maunds, rejecting any remainder, by which the maundage, calculated as above, may exceed such simple multiple.

4. For vessels in class II the tonnage shall be determined as follows:—

The tonnage of steamers shall be the registered tonnage as given in the certificate of survey of the steamer.

Tolls shall be levied on the actual weight of cargo carried on steamers, flats, barges and other vessels included in this class, as declared in the manifests.

6. This ticket may be demanded and checked by any navigation officer while the vessel is within the limits of the bhil channel, and must be kept on board and at hand for that purpose.

7. All tolls are payable on demand and shall be paid at the toll station before a vessel is permitted to proceed. Provided that the Collector of Tolls appointed under section VIII of the Act may at his discretion permit vessels belonging to individuals or firms of recognized standing to proceed without pre-payment, on an undertaking that the bills for tollage due shall be liquidated monthly on presentation.

BIHAR SCHOOL OF ENGINEERING.

Prospectus for Admission.

THIS School is under the management of the Principal of the Patna College, assisted by a Board of Visitors: it owes its origin to a fund raised by residents of Bihar to commemorate the visit to India of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. The object of the fund was the promotion of technical instruction in Bihar. The School was formally opened on the 11th July 1906 by His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

The number of students admitted to the first-year class of each year will be limited to 60, of whom only 15 can be other than Biharis by race (viz, natives of the North-Western Provinces, Central Provinces, or Bengalis domiciled in Bihar); but should the number of suitable applicants who are Biharis by race be insufficient to fill up the 45 vacancies, then the vacancies thus occurring can be given to those applicants who are natives of the North-Western Provinces, Central Provinces, or Bengalis domiciled in Bihar in that order

3. The School, as at present constituted, is chiefly engaged in training students for appointment as Sub-Overseers and Overseers.

UMESH CHANDRA SEN, Offg. Subordinate Judge, 1st Court, Saran.

Office of Subordinate Judge 1st Court, Chapra, the 6th June 1903. (626-1)

Bye-laws under Section 559 (4) prescribing the procedure to be followed by owners or occupiers desiring a water-supply.

1. The owner or occupier of any masonry building in Calcutta who requires a supply of filtered or unfiltered water for use within such building, and any person who required such a supply for the purpose of any business or trade or other object, shall send to the Chairman a written application on a printed form (to be supplied by the Chairman free of charge).

2. Such application shall specify the name of the licensed plumber who is to be employed on the work, and shall be signed by the applicant or an agent duly authorised on his behalf.

Bye-laws under Section 559 (5) prescribing a schedule of charges of water supplied for other than domestic purposes.

Every person who is supplied with unfiltered water within Calcutta under section 254 of the Act for any purpose other than a domestic purpose shall pay for the same at the rate of four annas for every 1,000 gallons, or at such other rate or rates as may be fixed by the General Committee from time to time. Such rate shall be payable in addition to any rent which may be payable for a meter provided under section 254 or 270 of the Act.

Every person who is supplied with filtered water within Calcutta under section 254 of the Act for any purpose other than a domestic purpose shall pay for the same at the rate of six annas for every 1,000 gallons, except when water is required for the manufacture of articles for consumption by human beings, when the charge shall be three annas per 1,000 gallons, or at such other rate or rates as may be fixed by the General Committee from time to time; such rate shall be payable in addition to any rent which may be payable for a meter provided under section 254 or 270 of the Act.

Bye-laws under Section 559 (8) of the Act regulating in any particular not specifically provided for in the Act. (i) The construction and maintenance of water-pipes, taps and fittings. (ii) All matters and things connected with the supply and use of water, the control of the water-supply and the administration of Chapter XX of the Act.

1. No person other than a licensed plumber shall execute any work connected with the supply of water to any premises in Calcutta.

2. No stop-cocks, taps, ferrules, cisterns or other fittings shall be used in connection with the water-supply unless they have been previously submitted to and stamped by an officer of the Corporation duly authorised by the Chairman in that behalf with a special die to indicate that they have been approved under section 260 of the Act.

3. After the application referred to in bye-law under section 559 (4) of the Act has been sanctioned, the licensed plumber in charge of the work shall send to the District Engineer a further written application on a printed form (to be supplied by the Corporation free of charge) for an order authorising him to open the street within which the water main is situated, to enable him to lay the service-pipe connecting such main with the premises in respect whereof the work is being carried on. Such application shall be accompanied by a separate written application for an order directing the shutting off of the water in the main.

Such applications shall be made not later than 2 P.M. on the day previous to that on which the proposed connection is to be made, and shall be accompanied by a fee of Rs. 1-12 in respect of every new connection, shifting connection or re-connection.

If the licensed plumber in charge of the work proposes to lay any pipes or to make any connection under the rails of any tramway or railway, the applications referred to in the preceding paragraph hereof shall be made at least 48 hours before the work is to be commenced.

4. No connection between a service-pipe and a main shall be permitted to be made otherwise than in the presence of the licensed plumber in charge of the work, or of some responsible and qualified person acting on his behalf and of a Municipal Officer authorised in that behalf.

If any excavation made in a street by a licensed plumber is not filled up by him in a proper and workmanlike manner and to the satisfaction of the Municipal Officer hereinbefore referred to, or if the street is not restored to its former condition, or if the street subsides within three months after such excavation has been filled up, the District Engineer may, at the expense of such licensed plumber, carry out such work as may appear to him to be necessary for the purpose of filling up such excavation and restoring such street to its former condition.

5. The service-pipes laid down by a person for the purpose of connecting his premises with the mains of the Corporation must be of galvanised-iron tubing or of lead. Such pipes must be capable of withstanding a pressure equal to that of a column of water 200 feet in height.

6. Lead pipes must be at least of the following weights: —

¾	„ „	...	...	3½ „ „ „
1	„ „	...	...	4½ „ „ „
1¼	„ „	...	...	5½ „ „ „
1½	„ „	...	...	6 „ „ „
1	„ „	...	...	8½ „ „ „

All joints are to be wiped-joints.

Galvanised-iron pipes must be at least of the following thicknesses:—

¾	„ „	...	...	Three-sixteenths of an inch.
1	„ „	...	...	Seven-thirty-seconds of an inch.

7. Only such bends or elbows as are in the opinion of the Engineer absolutely necessary will be allowed in any service-pipes.

8. If for the purpose of connecting any premises with the Corporation mains any trench or excavation has to be made or the pavement or surface of any street has to be opened or broken up, the licensed plumber in charge of the work shall cause the place to be properly fenced and guarded and to be sufficiently lighted during the night, and shall with all convenient speed and in a proper and workmanlike manner complete the work, fill in such trench or excavation after watering and ramming the same, and restore the surface of the road to its former condition, and carry away the earth and rubbish occasioned by such work to such place as may be required by the District Engineer.

9. A brass stop-cock of a pattern to be prescribed by the Chairman must be fitted to every service-pipe; such stop-cock must be placed outside the premises to which it belongs in such position as the Engineer may direct and must be covered with a cast-iron cover for the purpose of affording access to it and indicating its position.

The covers must be of a pattern approved by the Engineer.

10. All taps must be made of brass and must be of the screw-down loose valve type or of such other type approved by the Engineer as to obviate all risk of concussion in the pipes owing to the tap being closed too rapidly. Taps shall not be of the plug or barrel type or of any similar pattern. They must be of the best and most approved kind, and the name of the maker must in each case be stamped upon them.

11. All taps on filtered water pipes in or about a courtyard, compound, stable, cattle-shed, cow-house, out-office of any premises, and tenanted land must be fixed not less than 3 feet above ground level. No tap, whether erected before or after the passing of these bye-laws, shall be allowed to project outside any premises or in such a position as to be available for use by the public.

12. No tap may be altered or moved and no alteration or addition may be made in any existing pipe or work without the written consent of the Engineer.

13. Service-pipes must be laid at a depth of not less than 2 feet below the surface of the ground.

14. Whenever a service-pipe is laid, whether before or after the passing of these bye-laws, across a sewer or open drain, or in any place where, in the opinion of the Engineer, it is liable to injury, such pipe must be passed through an iron pipe of sufficient length and strength to afford due protection to it, and at such level as the Engineer may direct. If any dispute arises regarding the size or quality of the iron pipe, the matter shall be referred to the Engineer, whose decision shall be final.

15. No service-pipe shall be laid along or through or adjacent to any drain or water-course or in any place where, in the opinion of the Engineer, there is a risk or likelihood of the water in such service-pipe becoming contaminated.

16. No pipe shall be laid through or across any drain or water-course in such manner as in the opinion of the Engineer is likely to cause an obstruction in such drain or water-course

17. Every cistern and reserve tank must be absolutely watertight and must be provided with a ball-valve and with a tell-tale or warning pipe made of galvanized-iron and with proper means of access and inspection.

18. No cistern or reserve tank containing or intended to contain filtered water shall be placed immediately over or in the same room as a privy.

19. No service-pipe will be allowed under any circumstances to communicate directly or indirectly with the basin or the tap otherwise than through the cistern or reserve tank of a water-closet, connected privy or urinal.

20. No water-closet, connected privy or urinal shall be flushed otherwise than by a supply of water discharged direct from the cistern or reserve tank hereinbefore referred to.

21. No premises shall be furnished with more than one service-pipe either from the Municipal main or from any other premises without the written sanction of the Engineer.

PENALTY CLAUSE.

5. The person to whom the written permission shall be granted under bye-law 1 of these bye-laws or the person in charge of the work shall complete it with all convenient speed and shall fill up any opening, excavation or trench and restore the surface of the street to its former condition and maintain it in such a condition for a period of three months and carry away all earth and rubbish occasioned by the work as quickly as possible, and in default the Engineer may cause a written notice to be served upon the party concerned requiring him to carry out such work to the satisfaction of the Engineer.

6. Any person who shall commit a breach of any of the provisions of the foregoing bye-laws shall be liable to a fine which may extend to Rs. 20, and, in the case of a continuing breach, to a fine which may extend to Rs. 10 for every day during which the breach continues after conviction for the first breach.

to the Chairman to be necessary, and any person who fails to comply with such notice shall be liable to a fine which may extend to Rs. 10, and in the case of a continuing breach to a fine which may extend to Rs. 10 for every day during which the breach continues after conviction for the first breach.

Proposed Bye-laws made pursuant to Section 559 (26) of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1899, specifying the manner in which stables, cattle-sheds and cow-houses kept for profit are to be constructed and connected with the Municipal drains.

1. Every stable, cattle-shed and cow-house kept for profit which, after the date when this bye-law comes into force, may be constructed, extended or materially altered, or the roof whereof may, after the date aforesaid, be removed, shall conform to standard type plans approved by the General Committee, copies of which can be had on application at the Municipal Office, or the district office of the district within which any such stable, cattle-shed or cow-house is situated, and on payment of a fee of rupee one.

2. 3. In the unsewered area such cess-pool shall be constructed of bricks set in cement and cement-plastered, or, with the approval of the Chairman, some other suitable impervious material and so constructed as not to admit of rain water.

4. Every stable, cattle-shed and cow-house shall be properly lighted and ventilated; an open space of not less than one foot in width below the junction of the eaves and the wall of the building shall be kept open on all sides for light and ventilation in addition to such other openings as may be required by the Chairman.

5. Every stable, cattle-shed and cow-house shall be provided by the owner with an adequate supply of filtered water for the cattle to drink and for washing utensils used for milk; an adequate supply of unfiltered water shall also be provided by the owner for flushing purposes, except in the case of cow-houses referred to in section 254 (1) of the Act.

6. No well shall be allowed on the premises occupied by a stable, cattle-shed or cow-house.

He shall cause such receptacle to be constructed so that the bottom or floor thereof shall not in any case be lower than the surface of the ground adjoining such receptacle. He shall also cause such receptacle to be constructed in such a manner and of such materials and to be maintained at all times in such a condition as to prevent any escape of the contents thereof or any soakage therefrom into the ground or into the wall of any building. He shall, once at least every day, remove or cause to be removed all dung, manure, soil, filth or other offensive or noxious matter produced in or upon such stable, cattle-shed or cow-house and deposit it in such receptacle.

8. No person shall keep any horse or cattle or deposit the dung of any horse or cattle in such a situation or in such a manner as to pollute any water supplied for use, or used, or likely to be used by man for drinking or domestic purposes or for manufacturing ice or drinks for the use of man, or any water used or likely to be used in any dairy.

9. In case of the erection or material alteration of a stable, cattle-shed or cow-house, or in case of the removal of the roof the total area covered by the whole of such stable, cattle-shed or cow-house shall not exceed two-thirds of the total area of the site. The remaining one-third of the site shall be kept open to the sky, and shall be paved throughout with impermeable material to be approved by the Chairman and shall be provided with a drain, such drain being constructed of brick masonry or concrete plastered with Portland cement or of natural or artificial stone or of glazed half round pipes, and being connected with a Municipal sewer through trapped inlets in the manner prescribed by the Act.

10. If on any site more than one range of stables, cattle-sheds or cow-houses be constructed, or materially altered, or if the roof of any such stables, cattle-sheds or cow-houses be removed, such stables, cattle-sheds or cow-houses shall be disposed so as to form three sides of a parallelogram, the fourth side being left open and the interior of the parallelogram being occupied by an open court-yard.

11. On every cow-house premises for keeping milch-cows or buffaloes, a separate shed or place shall be provided for the temporary storage of milk and the keeping of milk vessels, and no such shed or place shall communicate with a cow-house.

12. The Chairman, if he considers it necessary, may by written notice require the owner of any stable, cattle-shed or cow-house, abutting upon or within fifty feet of any open drain or footpath, to construct and maintain a crossing over such drain or footpath of such description and of such materials and of such dimensions as the Chairman may direct, and any person who fails to comply with such notice shall be liable to a fine which may extend to Rs. 20, and in the case of a continuing breach shall be liable to a daily fine which may extend to Rs. 10 per diem for every day during which the breach continues after conviction.

13. Every person who shall offend against any of the foregoing bye-laws shall be liable for every such offence to a fine which may extend to Rs. 20, and, in the case of a continuing breach, to a fine which may extend to Rs. 10 for every day during which the breach continues after conviction for the first breach.

Port Adelaide River—Light's Passage Harbour Works.

The President, Marine Board, Port Adelaide, has given notice (No. 3 of 1903), informing Masters of Vessels, Pilots and others that during the construction of the training wall near the entrance to the Port Adelaide River, lights will be exhibited from the piles which have been erected as follows:—

An ordinary ship's riding light will be shown from the pile furthest to seaward, viz., abreast of the remains of the old pile lighthouse and two others at distances of about half a mile between each on the starboard hand from seaward. The outer one abreast of the old pile lighthouse, stands in about 12 feet and the other two in 6 feet and 3 feet respectively.

Four beacons for dredging marks will also be erected on the flats south and eastward of No. 1 leading beacons. These beacons will be surmounted by a head in the shape of the letter X. When the dredgers are working at night, these beacons will be lighted as follows:—The southern pair, one light on each; the nothern pair, two white lights vertical, 3 feet apart on each.

As these beacons and lights are on the flats, well out of the channel, no difficulty to navigation is anticipated. Steamers passing dredgers, barges, and pile drivers, or any work in progress, are required to slow down. (See By-law September 8th, 1892.)

Narakal.

WITH reference to Notice to Mariners No. 136, dated the 25th April 1903, issued by this Office, the Presidency Port Officer, Madras, has given further notice (No. 23 of 1903) that the smoothest water will be found in 5½ fathoms L. W. S. T. soft mud on the following bearings magnetic, viz.—

Mallipuram flagstaff	...	N. 80° E.
Narakal obelisk ...	...	N. 53° E.
Cochin lighthouse ...	...	S 45° E.

2. Mariners are cautioned that the mud flats off Narakal have extended seaward.

3. Narakal flagstaff having been dismantled and removed, the light, bright, fixed, will in future be exhibited from the Mallipuram flagstaff.

4. In taking up an anchorage due consideration should be given to the state of the weather. The anchorage given is a good one for all weathers, but smoother water will be found still further north. Vessels wishing for a quick despatch may, during fine weather, approach nearer Cochin to enable boats to get to and from Cochin between Vypeen point and the sands, but in this position during a fresh breeze a short sea soon gets up making shipping operation difficult and causing damage to boats.

RESOLUTION ON THE BUDGET ESTIMATES OF THE PORT COMMISSIONERS, CHITTAGONG, FOR THE YEAR 1903-1904.

No. 1004Marine.

Government of Bengal.

MARINE DEPARTMENT.

Calcutta, the 13th June 1903.

RESOLUTION.

READ—

Letter No. 134, dated the 9th May 1903, from the Chairman of the Port Commissioners, Chittagong, submitting the revised estimates (actuals) of the Commissioners for the year 1902-1903 and the budget estimates for the year 1903-1904.

THE statements of the actuals for 1902-1903 show a decrease of Rs. 24,020 in receipts and of Rs. 19,410 in expenditure as compared with the sanctioned estimates of receipts and expenditure of that year. This is mainly due to the fact that, during the year the Railway jetty has been taken over by the Assam-Bengal Railway as a part of their property, and that this item will no longer appear in the accounts of the Port Commissioners.

2. The Lieutenant-Governor approves the statements of actual outlay and earnings for the year 1902-1903.

3. The budget estimates for 1903-1904 have been based mainly on the average of the actuals of the last three years.

Receipts.

4. The Chittagong Port Commissioners' Act, 1887, has been recently amended with the object of empowering the Commissioners to levy a "river due" on all goods landed or shipped within port limits. A sum of Rs. 15,000, calculated at the rate of 2 annas per ton, has been provided for under this head.

The contribution by Government to the Port Fund from the Pilotage Fund has been increased from Rs. 1,200 to Rs. 2,500.

Expenditure.

5. Under the head "Miscellaneous" an outlay of Rs. 14,084 has been estimated for as compared with Rs. 6,672, the actuals of last yar. The increase is mainly due to a provision for the repairs and renewal of buoys and chains and for repairs to the Salt Jetties.

6. A sum of Rs. 16,295 has been provided for payment of the annual instalment that will become due to the Government in 1903-1904 on account of the loan for the steam-tug Gekko. A sum of Rs. 16,298 is still overdue from the Commissioners on this account, but the Government of India have lately sanctioned the temporary postponement of the payment of this amount.

7. An abstract of the actuals for the two years 1901-1902 and 1902-1903, and of the estimates for the year 1903-1904 is subjoined.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL, AND OF THE METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN ASSAM, FOR THE MONTH OF MAY 1903.

THE chief features of the weather during May were—

(1) Almost continuous high pressure, excess at times ranging up to ·15 inch.
(2) Excessive temperature, more especially during the first and third weeks, when mean excess in places exceeded 10°.
(3) Comparative absence of rainfall over the whole Province and in Assam.

As might be expected when pressure and temperature are affected by large departures from the normal, and rather rapid oscillations were frequent, numerous local storms occurred in all parts of the Province. Though thunderstorms were occurring almost daily in places, the rainfall was unusually light, and a noticeable feature with these storms was the comparatively small fall of temperature which followed. The only occasion on which a disturbance, accompanied by thunderstorms, caused moderately heavy general rain was towards the end of the month, and there is reason to believe that on that occasion the cyclonic disturbance in the Arabian Sea caused the westward draft of moist air over Central India in the upper atmosphere. At that time, between the 24th and 29th, weather in Bengal was influenced by two disturbances, one proceeding from the east, was first shown in Assam on the 24th, extending westward and meeting the moist air presumably from the Arabian Sea, or in some way connected with the other disturbance in the west. Weather was more unsettled in Bengal than at any other time during the month, and rainfall, in places heavy, occurred in all districts.

Weather was unusually settled over the Bay, as no cyclonic disturbance formed. The winds on the Burma coast on one or two occasions were blowing in the directions characteristic of cyclonic conditions, but the change was of only brief duration. These wind variations were followed by heavier rainfall in Burma, and the after effects of the slight disturbances were shown in the rainfall and lower temperature as far north as Assam. There was no appearance of it extending to Bengal, so that throughout the month weather in Bengal may be said to have been unaffected by any advance of monsoon winds from the Bay.

The cyclonic disturbance, which moved northwards over the Arabian Sea during the latter half of the month, affected weather in the south-west of the Bay about the 19th, when a depression was shown on the Madras coast. This depression had moved westward by the 20th, and its effect was confined to the variable winds and moderately heavy rainfall as far north as Cocanada.

At the beginning of the month very high temperature prevailed over the whole Province, excess varying from 4° in the west to 12° over the greater part of North Bengal. This excess was greater in day than in night temperatures—a feature which was noticeable during the greater part of the month. The pressure distribution was at that time favourable for westerly winds even in the extreme north; but as pressure changed rapidly on the 2nd, easterly wind became stronger in Assam and extended over the northern districts. Though temperature fell somewhat, there remained a large excess until a disturbance began in Assam on the 4th and moved slowly westward. With the advance of the disturbance, thunderstorms with rainfall occurred on the 6th and following days in North Bengal, on the 8th in East Bengal, and on the 9th in South-West Bengal. These were the dates on which thunderstorms with rain began, but they continued more or less irregularly until the 12th in Bengal Proper. In Orissa and Chota Nagpur the showers were scattered throughout, and in nearly all cases very light. They were, however, of daily occurrence in some parts of these divisions up to the end of the third week, when the second spell of high temperature began. In Bihar there was practically no rainfall until the 14th, when showers were fairly numerous.

During this period of showery weather, that is roughly during the second week, the area of high temperature moved westward, and in the eastern and central districts mean temperature was in slight defect. For a few days ordinary weather prevailed, with pressure and temperature both nearly normal. Then a wave of rising pressure advanced from the west, and with this rise of pressure the second period of excessive heat began. In advance of the change, however, a slight disturbance was caused by a shallow depression over Bengal on the 18th. Heavy cloud gathered on the 18th and temperature fell several degrees, but on the 19th the slight disturbance had ceased, and with a rapid rise of pressure from the west westerly winds became general over Bengal.

The excessive heat continued from the 20th to the 24th in Bengal.

During these days pressure had been falling, and the distribution was again normal on the 23rd. On the 23rd and 24th thunderstorms began in Assam and North Bengal. On the 25th they became general over the eastern districts, and scattered showers fell in the west of the Province. The rainfall was fairly general and in places heavy up to the 28th. The heavy showers which fell over a considerable part of the Province during this period of disturbance was, as has already been stated, probably in part due to the indraught of moist air from the west, thrown into the upper atmosphere by the cyclonic storm in the Arabian sea. Cloudy showery weather was general in Central India during those days, and the area of low temperature extending from the west coast of India as far as the border of Bengal shows the probable connection of the rainfall in Bengal with the distant disturbance in the west.

From the 25th to the 27th temperature was low, though not by very large amounts, and on the 28th there was a further large fall in the western districts, the greatest mean defect being 13° at Hazaribagh. Rainfall was then ceasing, and during the remaining days the showers were almost entirely confined to the extreme east. Temperature was rising, and by the 31st there was a moderate excess, except in North Bengal.

Pressure was almost continuously high, but considerable oscillations occurred at the times of unsettled weather. As defect was never large, the means for the month are above the normal at all stations, by amounts varying from ·07 inch at Cuttack to ·03 inch in North Bengal.

Temperature was very high at times, more specially during the day. In the early part of the month, when the highest day readings were recorded, night temperatures were above the normal by only small amounts. Towards the end of the month when the second heat spell occurred night temperatures were higher.

For the month as a whole average maximum temperature differed from the normal by amounts varying from a slight defect in the west of Chota Nagpur to excess of more than 5° over the north and centre of Bengal Proper. The largest excess amounts were 6° at Rampur Boalia and Sirajganj and 7° at Berhampore.

Minimum temperature as usual fell after the occurrence of thunderstorms, but the fall was not so large as in ordinary years, except during the few days of rainy weather towards the end of the month. Average excess in minimum temperature for the month was small in the south-western districts, and was rarely more than 2° in Bengal Proper and Bihar.

Rainfall was much lighter than usual over the whole Province except Chota Nagpur, and in Assam. Although local disturbances were numerous, the rainfall accompanying them was unusually light, except between the 25th and 28th, when, probably owing to the cyclonic disturbance in the west of India, rainfall was much heavier in Bengal than at any other time during the month The total fall in North Bengal was 6·6 and in East Bengal 5·8, the normal in both divisions being about 10 inches. In South-West Bengal defect was 2, in Orissa 1·8 and in Behar 1·4 inches. In Chota Nagpur the fall of 2·24 inches was practically normal.

In Assam, Cheera Punjee received less than half the normal, Silchar 7·3 inches, 10 inches less than the normal, and falls at the other stations were in defect by amounts ranging from 1 inch at Gauhati to 6 inches at Dibrugarh

The following table gives full data for comparison of the actual and normal rainfall of the month of May for all districts of the Province. The figures are derived from the average and actual rainfall of the rain-reporting stations in each district. The first column gives the normal or average district rainfall as determined from the observations of past years. The second column gives the actual district rainfall as determined from the actual rainfall of the month at the reporting stations in each district. The third column expresses the ratio of the actual district rainfall of the past month to the normal rainfall as a percentage. The fourth column gives the same information as the third in a slightly different form, stating as a percentage how much the district rainfall of the month varied in excess or defect from the normal:—

DARJEELING,
The 13th June 1903.

A. C EDWARDS,
Offg. Director of Public Instruction, Bengal.

BIHAR SCHOOL OF ENGINEERING.

Prospectus for Admission.

THIS School is under the management of the Principal of the Patna College, assisted by a Board of Visitors: it owes its origin to a fund raised by residents of Bihar to commemorate the visit to India of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. The object of the fund was the promotion of technical instruction in Bihar. The School was formally opened on the 11th July 1896 by His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

2. The number of students admitted to the first-year class of each year will be limited to 60, of whom only 15 can be other than Biharis by race (viz., natives of the North-Western Provinces, Central Provinces, or Bengalis domiciled in Bihar); but should the number of suitable applicants who are Biharis by race be insufficient to fill up the 45 vacancies, then the vacancies thus occurring can be given to those applicants who are natives of the North-Western Provinces, Central Provinces, or Bengalis domiciled in Bihar in that order.

3. The School, as at present constituted, is chiefly engaged in training students for appointment as Sub-Overseers and Overseers.

The curriculum includes—

(1) A sound study of Elementary Mathematics.
(2) Careful training in Survey work.
(3) Drawing, both Freehand and Engineering.
(4) Elements of road-making and the construction of simple buildings.
(5) Workshop practice, with hand tools and with machinery.

Students are prepared for the Overseer certificate of the Public Works Department. The necessary additional buildings have now been completed; and Government has agreed to reserve one appointment annually for a qualified student from this school, who must be a Bihari by race.

4. The next Session will commence on 6th July 1903.

5. In the Overseer Department, which corresponds to the Apprentice Department of the Sibpur College, the monthly fee is Re 1-8. All scholarship-holders, however, receive free tuition. Government scholarships of the value of Rs. 7 a month, tenable for one year, are awarded each year on the results of the annual examinations, eight being tenable in the second-year class, six in the third-year class, and six in the fourth-year class. Of the scholarships attached to the school, 75 per cent. of them are to be reserved for those students who are Biharis by race. The teaching is in English.

6. Candidates for admission to the Overseer Department must be under 20 years of age, must be Biharis by race or domicile, or natives of the North-Western Provinces or Central Provinces, and must have passed one of the tests mentioned below:—

(1) The Entrance Examination of an Indian University, in English and Mathematics.

(2) Standard VII of the Code of European Schools.

(3) Students who have not passed either of these tests, and who are otherwise eligible will have to pass an examination in English and Mathematics (of about the same standard as the Entrance Examination of the Calcutta University, in these subjects) to be held by the Principal of the Patna College on the 14th and 15th July respectively (from 6 A.M. to 9 A.M. each day).

7. Candidates for admission must apply to the Principal not later than the 30th June. Their application must give the following particulars:—

(a) Name, address, and occupation of father or guardian.

(b) Race and religion, and evidence to show that he is either a Bihari or a native of the North-Western Provinces or Central Provinces or a domiciled Bengali.

(c) A certificate of good moral character.

(f) A certificate of having passed either of the first two of the three tests mentioned above, failing which the application will be kept pending, till a certificate showing that the candidate has passed the third test is given to the Principal.

8. There is also an Amin class, admission to which may be obtained by students who do not know English. In the Amin class the course of study is for one year, and the monthly fee is Re. 1. An Amin student is taught Elementary Surveying with a corresponding amount of Mathematics and of Geometrical Drawing. He will not be admitted to the Workshop. A student in the first-year class of the Overseer Department who fails to pass the examination for promotion to the second-year class, but who has shown an adequate knowledge of Elementary Surveying, and the other subjects taught in the Amin class, may, at his option, leave the school with an Amin certificate.

(b) Candidates for Amin class who have not passed the middle English or middle vernacular examination will be examined at the school on the 6th July, candidate failing at this examination will not be admitted.

9. Except in very special cases, a student will not be admitted to the Amin class for the Session that commences 6th July 1903, unless application for admission is made before 30th June 1903.

10. Every candidate for admission to the School must bring a certificate of good character from the Head of the Institution from which he has come.

11. All candidates for admission to the School should present themselves personally at the School on the 6th July.

3. The first day of the test-examination in all zilla schools in the Chota Nagpur Division will be the 15th December 1903.

4. Each private student will have to pay a fee of Rs. 2 for permission to appear at the test-examination to the head of the institution at which he appears. The balance of such fees, after payment of expenses (stationery, &c.), will go as remuneration to the Examiners.

5. Candidates for the test-examination should apply to this office not later than the 11th November 1903. They should forward the certificates granted to them under the transfer rules by the Head Master of the school in which they last read. In the case of a candidate who had failed at a previous Entrance examination and did not join a school afterwards, the Registrar's receipt, in original, will be accepted in lieu of the transfer certificate.

6. A student who had failed to pass the annual examination for promotion to the first class at the end of Session 1902-1903 and then left the school will not, under any circumstances, be allowed to appear at the Entrance examination of 1904.

10. The applications and fees for admission to the Entrance examination must be forwarded to the Registrar of the Calcutta University by the private candidates themselves, so as to reach his office on or before the 22nd January 1904.

11. The Entrance examination in 1904 will be held on the 7th March 1904 and following days.

F.A. AND B.A. EXAMINATION, 1904.

1. Deputy Inspectors of Schools, Sub-Inspectors of Schools, and bonâ fide teachers of recognised English schools in the Chota Nagpur Division of two years' standing, i.e., who have served as such for full two academical sessions, or for six months in the case of those who were admitted to a former examination of the same class, will be admitted to the above examinations. These latter must have served for six months since the date of the last examination to which they were admitted. School Masters should produce certificates of character and length of service (with dates) from the Managers of the schools in which they are employed. Their applications must reach this office not later than the 3rd January 1904.

2. Candidates for the B.A. examination must forward with the applications their F.A. certificates and those for the F.A. examination their Entrance certificates.

Simla, the 12th June 1903.

No. 2704-I.A.—The following despatch to His Majesty's Secretary of State for India with enclosures relating to the celebrations held in Delhi in December 1902 and January 1903 in honour of the Coronation of His Majesty the King, Emperor of India, is published for general information :—

No. 58 (Internal), dated Simla, the 7th May 1903.

From—The Government of India,
To—The RIGHT HON'BLE LORD GEORGE F. HAMILTON, G.C.S.I., His Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

WE have the honour to furnish Your Lordship, for the information of His Majesty's Government, with an account of the celebrations held at Delhi in December and January last in honour of the Coronation of His Majesty the King, Emperor of India. Copies of the official programmes are enclosed, and, as Your Lordship is aware, a commission to write an official history of the proceedings has been entrusted to Mr. Stephen Wheeler. As a narrative, therefore, this despatch is intentionally brief, and it relates more particularly to the political aspects of this great event.

2. It was in November 1901 that the intention to hold an Imperial Durbar with the above-named object was first publicly announced. The occasion was the notification of the issue of invitations by His Majesty the King-Emperor to a limited number of Indian Chiefs to attend his Coronation in England; and it was at the same time explained that in order to afford the remaining Chiefs, who could not be present in London, an opportunity of testifying their loyalty to his Throne and Person, His Majesty had instructed the Viceroy to hold a celebration in India at a date subsequent to the English ceremony. In February 1902 a Proclamation was published in the Gazette of India, naming Delhi as the place and the 1st January 1903 as the date of the proposed gathering: and this was followed by invitations to attend addressed by His Excellency the Viceroy to the Heads of Local Governments and Administrations and to the Ruling Chiefs of India. In September 1902 the news was made public that His Majesty had graciously deputed His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught to represent the Royal Family upon this momentous occasion: and the utmost satisfaction was everywhere expressed at this evidence of the warm personal interest taken by His Majesty in the approaching ceremony and at the high compliment to India which the choice implied.

3. Throughout the summer, and still more after the successful celebration of His Majesty's Coronation in London on 9th August 1902, our preparations for the forthcoming event in India continued apace: and before the end of the year they had reached so advanced a stage that the most important functions had been several times rehearsed on the spot, and there remained only the arrival of the principal actors on the scene, and the occurrence of favourable weather, to ensure the triumphant realisation of our plans.

4. By the 27th December the principal Ruling Chiefs of India, many representatives of Foreign Powers, the leading officials of our Government, and a strong force from the Indian Army had assembled at Delhi, and on the 29th of the month, the ceremonies were inaugurated by the State entry of His Excellency the Viceroy and Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught. His Excellency arrived shortly in advance of Their Royal Highnesses. He was met at the station by the Ruling Chiefs, foreign representatives, and leading officials, and, attended by them, he received Their Royal Highnesses, who had journeyed direct from Bombay. The route of the Entry lay through the principal streets of the city. Preceded by their escorts, the Imperial Cadet Corps, the Viceroy's Body Guard, and their respective staffs, His Excellency and Their Royal Highnesses headed the Procession on magnificently appointed State elephants. Then followed 51 Ruling Chiefs similarly mounted and riding two abreast; His Royal Highness the Grand Duke of Hesse, whose presence at Delhi, as the guest of the Viceroy, was heartily welcomed as an additional evidence of the interest of the Royal family, the Governors, Lieutenant-Governors and Chief Commissioners of every province of the Indian Empire, and the Commander-in-Chief, each with his escort, the Members of the Viceroy's Council, the Lieutenant-General Commanding Bengal, and Chiefs from Baluchistan and the North-West Frontier, while the elephant retinues of the Chiefs brought up the rear. In this order the procession slowly passed under a cloudless sky through the avenues of the city. The Ruling Chiefs who did not join in the Procession were accommodated in a suitable stand in front of the Town Hall. The galleries of the Jumma Musjid had been placed by the courtesy of the Managing Committee at the disposal of the Viceroy for the accommodation of English and European guests. The streets were lined throughout their entire length by troops, and behind the troops there was an immense concourse of spectators. It would be safe to say that no such crowd of persons has ever before been assembled at Delhi. Traffic had been suspended from an early hour, and for four miles the streets, the mosques, the temples, specially erected stands, and every roof and balcony commanding a view, were thronged. Portraits of Their Majesties and loyal mottoes were freely displayed in the native quarters. The brilliance of the spectacle was only equalled by the order and enthusiasm that prevailed. The welcome accorded to Their Royal Highnesses was particularly marked, the affection with which their former stay in this country is remembered enhancing the cordiality of the greeting which all classes were eager to pay to such illustrious representatives of the Royal House. After nearly two hours the Procession, which had passed out of the city, reached its destination in the various Camps, and dispersed.

5. Continuing with the chronological order of events, on the 30th December the Viceroy opened an Exhibition of Indian Art in the Kudsia Gardens. The exhibits were contained in a handsome building specially erected in the Mogul style, and the collection and arrangement had been carried out with great ability by Sir George Watt. The results exceeded our most sanguine anticipations. Unique specimens of ancient art, mostly chosen from the treasures of Native States and now shown to the public for the first time, were exhibited side by side with a collection of the best artwares of the present day, the object being, as explained in the speech of His Excellency the Viceroy, a copy of which we enclose, on the one hand, to demonstrate the capabilities of indigenous art and, on the other hand, to raise the existing standard by a comparison with the best models of the past. Our sincere thanks are due to the many Chiefs and Native gentlemen who contributed to the loan collections and who stimulated competition by the offer of rewards to the competing artisans. Many of the latter, together with selected Native officials from all parts of the country, were assisted to visit the Exhibition; and to the public at large, we are glad to say, it afforded considerable attraction. Forty-eight thousand persons paid for admission, and purchases to the value of Rs. 3,62,332 were made. As permanent results, we are hopeful that a much-needed impetus may have been given to many deserving branches of Indian art, and that craftsmen and patrons alike will be encouraged to revive the ancient traditions and to adapt them to the requirements of modern life.

6 Omitting the Durbar, to which we shall refer later, the next important event was the Grand Chapter of the two Indian Orders of the Star of India and the Indian Empire held on the night of the 3rd January in the Diwan-i-Am, or Hall of Public Audience, in the Palace Fort of the Emperor Shah Jehan. This magnificent structure had, without the smallest injury to or alteration of its own features, been enlarged by temporary additions to three times its original size, and had been connected for the occasion by a covered passage with the white marble Diwan-i-Khas, or Hall of Private Audience. So skilfully were these additions made under the supervision of Colonel J. W. Thurburn, R.E., Secretary to the Punjab Government in the Public Works Department, and Rai Bahadur Ganga Ram, Superintendent of Works, that a stranger could hardly distinguish the new building from the old—even in the blaze of light in which the ceremony was held.

The Chapter was attended by 11 Knights Grand Commanders of the Star of India, 15 Knights Grand Commanders of the Indian Empire, 14 Knights Commanders of the Star of India, and 16 of the Indian Empire, 41 Companions of the former and 110 of the latter Order. It was by far the largest Chapter that has ever been held in India. Nearly 2,000 spectators were present. No less than 74 admissions or promotions in the Orders were made. Among those so honoured were the Chiefs of Charkhari, Cochin, Miraj (Senior Branch), Nabha, Shahpura, Sirmur, Sirohi, Tehri, and Travancore, the Khan of Dir, the Mirs of Hunza and Nagar, and the Mehtar of Chitral.

On the night of the 6th January, the Palace was again the scene of a State Ball, which, from the number of distinguished persons present and the unique surroundings, has had no equal in this country. Most of the Ruling Chiefs attended, and in all more than 4,000 persons were present.

7. The 4th January being Sunday, Divine Service was celebrated at a specially arranged State ceremony, held in the open air, by the Metropolitan, assisted by the Bishop of Lahore. It was attended by His Excellency the Viceroy, Their Royal Highnesses, and all the officials and European troops present in Delhi.

8. On the 8th January, a Grand Review of the whole body of troops assembled was held on a level plain in the vicinity of the Camps. There were present about 34,000 troops of all ranks under His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief. Stands were erected for the accommodation of spectators, and many thousands also attended in carriages, on horseback, and on foot. His Excellency the Viceroy rode on to the ground at 11 A.M. with Their Royal Highnesses the Duke of Connaught and the Grand Duke of Hesse, and took the salute as the troops marched past. The Review was in all respects a most brilliant success, and produced a marked effect on the many warlike classes present. The Imperial Service Troops were all represented, the Contingents from Alwar, Bhopal, Bikaner, Gwalior, Jhind, Nabha, Patiala, and Sirmur being led past the saluting point by their Chiefs or other members of the ruling family. The enthusiasm created by the appearance of Chiefs of all ages, from the youthful prince who now occupies the Patiala gadi to the venerable figure of the veteran Sikh Chief of Nabha, will long be remembered by both Chiefs and people, and must tend to strengthen the military ties that unite the different constituents of the Indian Empire.

At Lord Lytton's Imperial Assemblage in 1877, an improvised Review of the Retainers of Native Chiefs preceded the Military Review. On the present occasion a separate morning was set apart for the Retainers' Review, and this ceremony, which took place on the 7th January, was one of the most picturesque and interesting of the celebrations of the fortnight. Some 40 States sent contingents, and great trouble had been taken to give a faithful representation of the old fashioned arms and equipment that are now passing out of use.

9. Owing to the enormous extent of ground covered by the various Camps, and to the press of daily and even hourly engagements, it was impossible for His Excellency the Viceroy to receive and return the visits of the unprecedented number of Chiefs and nobles who were present at Delhi. In order, however, to provide an opportunity of meeting all these distinguished personages, and to enable them to meet each other, two parties were given by His Excellency for the Indian guests—one at the Kudsia Gardens on the afternoon of the 2nd January for official guests other than Chiefs, and one for Ruling Chiefs on the evening of the 9th January at the Viceroy's Camp.

On the latter occasion an Investiture was held, at which His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, as Great Master of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath, invested the Nizam of Hyderabad with the Grand Cross of that Order, an honour which was intensely appreciated by His Highness, and the Maharaja of Kolhapur with the Grand Cross of the Royal Victorian Order. His Royal Highness also presented gold medals to various Chiefs who had attended His Majesty's Coronation in England, and by His Majesty's Command His Excellency the Viceroy conferred the honour of Knighthood on several gentlemen.

10. Apart from official functions, the public rejoicings assumed various forms. Thus, on the 2nd January, there was an illumination of the city and a display of fireworks. A military assault-at-arms was held on the 3rd and the 5th January; and on most days there were numerously attended athletic contests, such as polo, football, and hockey, for which prizes were presented by the Viceroy. For the first time in Indian History might be seen on the same ground the game of polo, as still played in the remote mountain States of Hunza and Nagar on one side of India and Manipur on the other, and as borrowed from them and subsequently developed by the English both in India and in England. Concerts also were given by the military massed bands, numbering 2,000 performers, under the direction of Captain G. B. Sanford.

11. From careful enquiries made at the time, we estimate that in addition to the normal population of the city, which was returned at the recent Census as 208,000, not less than 173,000 persons were attracted to Delhi by the Durbar. These figures afford a striking contrast to the 68,000 who were reckoned as having been drawn to Delhi by the Imperial Assemblage of 1877. Lists of the individuals invited by Government or attending officially will be found among the enclosures to this despatch; but the following additional details will be of interest. Of the principal Ruling Chiefs 103 were invited and 100 attended. Minor Chiefs were, as a rule, not invited; and many, to whom for financial reasons the visit to Delhi might have proved burdensome, were excused. In view of the recent heavy calls that had been made upon some of the Chiefs, mainly in consequence of famine, we were careful to explain that there was no occasion for ostentatious display, and in a few cases we helped to relieve a temporary encumbrance by advancing the necessary funds.

Invitations to attend or to send representatives were also addressed to His Majesty the Shah of Persia and His Majesty the King of Siam, and to Their Highnesses the Amir of Afghanistan, the Sultan of Maskat, and the Maharaja-Dhiraj of Nepal. These States were eventually represented by General Chowphya Surawongse, the Chief personal Aide-de-Camp of the King of Siam, Colonel Muhammad Ismail Khan, the Amir of Afghanistan's Envoy with the Viceroy, the son and heir of the Sultan of Maskat, and the Prime Minister of Nepal. An invitation to depute a representative was also addressed through His Britannic Majesty's Minister at Tokio to the allied Government of His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Japan. The result was a Mission headed by General Baron Yasukata Oku, who, we have reason to believe, appreciated the military manœuvres which preceded the Durbar as highly as did the Indian Army his presence among them.

We also felt that the occasion was one in which it was eminently desirable that our fellow-subjects in the colonies of Australia and South Africa with whom we have so many connections, and who are certain in the future to be brought into much closer contact with India, should be afforded an opportunity of participating. The invitations which the Viceroy addressed to their Governments were responded to by the deputation of Sir Richard Baker, President of the Federal Senate, from the former, and Sir Richard Solomon, Attorney-General of the Transvaal, from the latter.

Their Excellencies Colonel Sir Eduardo Galhardo, K.C.I.E., Governor-General of Portuguese India, and Mons. Victor Laurezac, Governor of the French Settlements in India, and the leading members of the Foreign Consular Body in India, also honoured us by assisting at the ceremonies as our guests.

Further, with a view to giving to the world at large a full, immediate, and unbiassed account of the celebrations, we invited the leading journals of the United Kingdom and India to depute their representatives to attend the Durbar as our guests; and we extended similar hospitality and facilities to any other influential journals which applied to us. We have every reason to be grateful to those who profited by our invitation, for the admirable accounts of our proceedings which they circulated by telegraph and post to all parts of the world.

12. In inviting the attendance of the Heads of Local Governments and Administrations, we intimated that they should be accompanied by a limited number of the members of their administration, leading officials, native noblemen and gentlemen, and heads of representative bodies.

All the Europeans thus invited were treated as the personal guests of the head of the province or administration to which they belonged and were accommodated in the head-quarters or Central Camp of the province. The Ruling Chiefs with the Political Officers attached to them were encamped in separate camps grouped territorially, and the native noblemen, officials and others were for the most part in separate Provincial Camps, while some secured accommodation in the city and civil station of Delhi.

The Central Camps, including those of His Excellency the Viceroy, the various Local Governments and Administrations, the Commander-in-Chief and the Provincial Commands, and the Foreign and Press Camp, occupied a site historic in the annals of 1857, below the famous Ridge. The population of these camps alone, including followers, numbered over 13,000; and considerations of space and sanitation demanded the location elsewhere of the Provincial Camps with their 35,000 inhabitants, of the Military Camps with their strength of 56,000, and of the miscellaneous camps, which sheltered another 12,000. The most convenient sites were selected, but, even so, they extended over an area of 40 square miles, while the remaining 57,000 of additional population found quarters in the city and civil station. A map, showing the location of the different camps with the railways and roads, is one of the enclosures with this despatch.

13. It will be readily understood that an encampment of this size entailed elaborate preparations. Many thousands of tents had to be collected. Camp sites had to be levelled and 40 miles of new roads were constructed. A 2′ 6″ gauge light railway, 7 miles in length, was built to connect the city with the Central Camp and the Durbar Amphitheatre, and carried 102,098 passengers from first to last, exclusive of 350 holders of season tickets: extensions were also made from existing main lines to facilitate the delivery of the heavy material for the Camp. The existing water-supply was supplemented by 72 reservoirs, 45 wells, and 38 miles of pipes: and 2,475 persons were employed as a special sanitary staff. Special telegraph, telephone, and postal services were organised; and the Central Camp, the Fort, and the principal streets of the city were lighted by electricity, plant which had already been ordered by our Military Department, for the lighting and ventilation of barracks being utilised for the purpose. The food-supply was catered for partly by private enterprise, and partly by the Supply and Transport Department. For the Durbar itself a temporary Amphitheatre in white and gold was erected, according to a plan prepared by the Viceroy, with the assistance of Sir Swinton Jacob. This structure, which turned out to be pre-eminently well adapted for its purpose, and which was also utilised for the Retainers' Review and the military assault-at-arms, was designed exclusively in the Indo-Saracenic, or Mogul style, every detail being copied from buildings at Delhi or Agra. It was erected on approximately the same site as Lord Lytton's Amphitheatre in 1877; but it was entirely different in size and shape, and it held three times the number of spectators, since it provided seating and standing accommodation for no fewer than 16,000 persons. A plan of the Amphitheatre, showing the seating arrangements, is enclosed

The whole of the arrangements were under the supervision of a Central and an Executive Committee. The former was the initiatory and controlling authority, and its decisions were carried out by the Executive Committee or by the Government Department concerned. Thus the Home Department undertook the control of the Police arrangements, the Military Works Department that of the electric installation, and the Military Department that of the markets managed by the Supply and Transport Corps, while the control of ceremonies remained with the Foreign Department.

To make provision for the peace and the maintenance of good order at the Coronation Durbar, and to provide a simple and speedy procedure for dealing with the various petty offences that were likely to occur in the camps, a short Act, called the Delhi Durbar Police Act, 1902, was passed by the Punjab Legislative Council, and of this we enclose a copy.

In other ways we received valuable assistance from the Punjab Government which deputed its Sanitary Commissioner to take charge of the Sanitation and Conservancy of the Camps, its Inspector-General of Police to control the Police arrangements, and its Chief Engineer to supervise the buildings, water-supply, and roads. The further special agency included a Camp Officer in executive charge of each Camp; a Special Magistrate for the Central Camp, and one for each group of Provincial Camps; an Executive Sanitary Officer, a Health Officer, and a Plague Officer; a Railway Officer for the construction and management of the light railway; and a staff of Attachés to attend to the details of the various ceremonies and to the reception of the Chiefs.

14. How successful were the exertions of all these different agents, and how fortune waited upon their enterprise, may be illustrated by the fact that, so far as we are aware among the vast crowds temporarily assembled at Delhi, with few of the advantages offered by great European cities, not a single serious accident occurred. The proceedings were also favoured with the most agreeable weather, rain only falling upon a single night, and then only in sufficient quantity to lay the dust and to add greatly to the comfort as well as to the spectacular effect of the great Military Review. Though the temperature was cold at night in the concluding weeks of December, it continued to get warmer every day, and throughout the fortnight of official celebrations may be said to have been perfect.

15. From this description of the preliminaries, we now pass to an account of the Durbar itself. Of the picturesque side of this memorable gathering we need say but little. The long lines of troops: the wide plain filled with a multitude of all races of the Empire: the great assembly in the Amphitheatre, where the Chiefs, Governors, Colonial and Foreign representatives, and leading officials occupied seats on either side of the Viceroy's Dais; the emotion stirred by the entry of the small band of Mutiny heroes; these have all been described in the columns of the Press. Similarly, full justice has been rendered to the combined magnificence and variety of a display which brought together, in their national dresses or garbs of State, figures so widely separated by race and residence as the Arab Sheikhs of the Aden Protectorate, the Baluch and Pathan Chieftains of the Indian border, the heirs or representatives of the States of Nepal, Sikkim, and Maskat, and the picturesquely clad Shan Chieftains from the Salwein and the Mekong. To Muhammadans the day was the anniversary of the Id-ul-Fitr, and to allow of their devotions, the Durbar was fixed for noon Punctually to the hour His Excellency the Viceroy drove into the arena escorted by his Body Guard and the Imperial Cadet Corps, and ascended the Dais, whither he had been preceded, in a separate procession, by Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught. The Herald then advanced on horseback accompanied by his trumpeters, and by command of the Viceroy read aloud the Proclamation, announcing the Coronation of His Majesty the King, Emperor of India. On the conclusion of the Proclamation, the Royal Standard was unfurled to the sound of the National Anthem and an Imperial Salute of 101 guns. His Excellency then addressed the Assemblage, gathered, as he said, that day to symbolise and give expression to the united loyalty of the Empire to His Majesty's mighty and benevolent rule. The announcement of the gracious message which His Majesty had desired to be conveyed to his Indian people was received with enthusiastic cheering, and repeated applause greeted the Viceroy's references to the Princes and peoples of India, to the great future lying before the country, and to the favours which the Government desired to associate with the occasion. Translations of His Excellency's speech in Urdu had been distributed to the Ruling Chiefs and Native gentlemen on their arrival at the Amphitheatre, so that they might more readily follow the proceedings.

At the conclusion of the address, of which copies in English and Urdu are included in the enclosures to this despatch, three cheers for His Majesty were given by the audience and repeated with overpowering effect by the troops and spectators outside. The Ruling Chiefs were then presented to His Excellency the Viceroy and His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught. This proceeding, which was in reality a reversion to the time-honoured practice of Indian Accession Durbars, had been introduced by the Viceroy and specially explained by him to the Chiefs, in order to enable them to play a personal part in the proceedings, and to testify individually their sentiments of loyalty and devotion to the Throne by tendering to the Representative and to the Brother of His Majesty with their own lips the congratulations and heartfelt vows of attachment evoked by the moving character of the scene, in which they thus became chief actors instead of mere spectators The suggestion was cordially welcomed by the Chiefs as soon as they realised its import. The whole of them came forward, without exception, attended in some cases by a son or a Minister, and in accents of unmistakeable pleasure and sincerity offered their dutiful and loyal congratulations to His Majesty on his accession to the Throne, and expressed their satisfaction at being present at the great and notable solemnity held to proclaim the fact to the Princes and people of India. This ceremony, which was perhaps the most impressive feature of the Durbar, brought the latter to a close.

16. On the evening of the same day a State Dinner was given by His Excellency the Viceroy in his Camp to the principal official guests, and the health of His Majesty the King-Emperor and of His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught were proposed by His Excellency, and enthusiastically received. We enclose copies of the speeches made by the Viceroy on this occasion and of the Duke of Connaught's reply.

17. His Excellency the Viceroy and Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught left Delhi on Saturday, the 10th January, the same ceremonies being observed at their departure as on their arrival.

18. There thus came to an end the most imposing ceremony, or rather series of ceremonies, that has ever been held in India in British or perhaps in any times. The conception of the Durbar, the control of the arrangements and supervision of the thousand and one details which were essential to success, were the work of the Viceroy, who made himself responsible for the entire undertaking, and visited Delhi no fewer than four times in the nine months proceeding the Durbar As regards the policy which underlay the conception and inspired the execution of a scheme with which we regard it as a privilege to have been associated, we cannot better describe it than in His Excellency's own words during the recent Budget Debate on the 25th March 1903—

"But to me, and I hope to the majority of us, the Durbar meant not a panorama or a procession. It was a landmark in the history of the people, and a chapter in the ritual of the State. What was it intended for? It was meant to remind all the Princes and peoples of the Asiatic Empire of the British Crown that they had passed under the dominion of a new and single sovereign, to enable them to solemnise that great and momentous event, and to receive the Royal assurance and greeting. And what was its effect? They learned that under that benign influence they were one, that they were not scattered atoms in a heterogeneous and cumbersome mass, but co-ordinate units in a harmonious and majestic whole. The scales of isolation and prejudice and distrust fell from their eyes, and from the Arab Sheikhs of Aden on the west to the Shan Chiefs of the Mekong on the borders of China, they felt the thrill of a common loyalty and the inspiration of a single aim. Was there nothing in this? Is it nothing that the Sovereign at his Coronation should exchange pledges with his assembled lieges, of protection and respect on the one side, of spontaneous allegiance on the other? Is it nothing that the citizens of the Empire should learn what that Empire means? Even if we take the rest of India, which could not be present at Delhi, but held its own rejoicings in its own place, is it nothing to lift an entire people for a little space out of the rut of their narrow and parochial lives, and to let them catch a glimpse of a higher ideal, an appreciation of the hidden laws that regulate the march of nations and the destinies of men? I believe that the Durbar, more than any event in modern history, showed to the Indian people the path which, under the guidance of Providence, they are treading, taught the Indian Empire its unity, and impressed the world with its moral as well as material force. It will not be forgotten. The sound of the trumpets has already died away. The Captains and the Kings have departed. But the effect produced by this overwhelming display of unity and patriotism is still alive, and will not perish. Everywhere it is known that upon the throne of the East is seated a power that has made of the sentiments, the aspirations, and the interests of 300 millions of Asiatics a living thing, and the units in that great aggregation have learned that in their incorporation lies their strength. As a disinterested spectator of the Durbar remarked, 'Not until to-day did I realise that the destinies of the East still lie, as they always have done, in the hallow of India's hand' I think too that the Durbar taught the lesson not only of power but of duty. There was not an officer of Government there present, there was not a Ruling Prince, nor a thoughtful spectator, who must not at one moment or other have felt that participation in so great a conception carried with it responsibility as well as pride, and that he owed something in return for whatever of dignity or security or opportunity the Empire had given to him."

19. The feelings of loyalty and devotion to the Throne and of pride in the might of an Empire, of which they realised that they were integral parts, were clearly testified by the remarks made by the Chiefs as they tendered to the Viceroy and His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught their felicitations and assurances of homage to the Crown. Sometimes a Chief had rehearsed a short speech, but the power of the moment was upon him, and his formal utterance melted into a simple but heartfelt and obviously sincere expression of the pride and pleasure that he felt in assisting as a partner in the toils and joys of Empire and in tendering his congratulations to the Sovereign. Could any studied oration have been more eloquent than the few words of the aged Raja of Nabha?

"Now" said he, "I can die in peace, as I have discharged the three duties of a true Sikh,—I have lived according to the precepts of the Gurus, I have aided the State with my sword, and now I have paid my personal homage to my Sovereign"

Her Highness the Begam of Bhopal, who took her place, veiled, among the other Chiefs, presented a written address in which, after referring to the auspicious circumstance in the eyes of Muhammadans that the Durbar should coincide with their Id, she, "as the well-wisher and sincere admirer of the British Paramount Power," assured Government "on this historic occasion, not only of the fidelity, devotion and affection of myself, my sons, my people and of the women of my State, but also of the loyalty of the whole Muhammadan population of India, for faithfulness and obedience to the Ruler are both strictly ordained by the Muhammadan religion."

We could multiply such quotations from every speech made that day; but as these will be collected in the Official History, we will only now refer to an address subsequently delivered by His Highness the Nizam on his return from Delhi to Hyderabad, in which he said:—"It was a source of great pleasure to me that I was enabled to take my part in the Coronation Durbar of His Majesty the Emperor of India (may his generosity last for ever), and after the custom of my ancestors to show, in a simple, straightforward, and soldierly manner, by word and deed, my historical friendship and loyalty. * * * I also count this journey particularly fortunate in that it enabled me to meet at Delhi my contemporary Chiefs and high officers."

20. We trust we have brought home to Your Lordship the extent to which the ceremony of the Durbar was regarded by the Ruling Chiefs and by those who took part in it as a solemn and almost religious observance, and also as a great ceremonial of Imperial and awe inspiring significance. The occasion was wholly dissevered from the ideas or associations of an ordinary Durbar. It was felt that this was the Sovereign's Durbar, held by his orders for the celebration of the most auspicious event in his reign. Accordingly it was the message of the Sovereign that excited the loudest applause at the Durbar. Every mention of his name evoked a similar demonstration, while the reception accorded to his Royal Brother was pregnant with the same lesson. No one who was present can have failed to carry away the conviction that the most potent force in the union of Great Britain with India is the veneration and affection that are entertained for the Throne.

If such was the immediate effect of the ceremony on those Princes and Chiefs of India whose lives had been passed under the immediate hegemony of the British Government, its influence upon those who have more recently come under our sway, or who are not so intimately connected with our rule was even more marked. The Afghan Envoy at the Durbar enquired if the representatives of Foreign Powers were present, for, said he, this assembly, resembling the final gathering at the Day of Judgment, could only bring home to them the futility of opposing a Power, which could thus assemble without force or compulsion, but simply by the ties of loyalty and affection, an entire universe of peoples and creeds. Much the same ideas were expressed by the Prime Minister of Nepal; while the representatives of the distant Gilgit tribes laughed when they thought of the day when they had attempted to pit their puny strength against even a feudatory of such a Power.

The effect of the display of military power at the Review was no less remarkable, and undoubtedly impressed the representatives of Foreign Powers who were present. We attach special importance to the impression caused by the eagerness of the Chiefs to appear in public at the head of their troops as feudatories of the Empire. The interest taken by the Chiefs as a body in the contingents of the Imperial Service Troops was noticeable and cannot fail greatly to promote this most useful and patriotic movement. Their appearance on parade was highly creditable, so much so, indeed, that the Baluch Chiefs remarked that they only differed, if at all, from the regular army in the greater perfection of their equipment and drill.

We believe that these impressions were no mere transient phases of sensuous emotion, but that the striking incidents, of which they were the privileged spectators, and the general sense of well ordered power and popular contentment, of good governance on the one hand and identity of interest on the other, which marked the whole proceedings, will continue to produce their effect on all who were there present long after the Delhi Durbar has passed away, save as the treasured memory of a splendid and ennobling scene.

21. There is still another sense in which, as His Excellency anticipated, the Durbar has achieved a most beneficial result, and has had a far-reaching effect. The growing power of the railway, of the press, and other means of communication, has done much to bring the different parts of India into contact with one another, and to obliterate their divergences; but on no previous occasion have so many of the Chiefs and nobles and representative persons of India of all races and religions had an opportunity of meeting together, not for an hour or a day, but for a period of weeks. Much was done by the friendly exchange of ideas at social gatherings and official functions to break down the barriers of ignorance or distrust which have tended to keep different classes and individuals apart, and have proved a serious obstacle to the cohesion of the body politic. That the Chiefs themselves thoroughly appreciated the opportunities afforded is clearly shown by the remarks of His Highness the Nizam already quoted, and by messages of a similar character which have reached the Viceroy from many other quarters. Nor is it the Chiefs alone who benefited in this way. Advantage was taken of the occasion by our civil and military officers of different Provinces who were assembled for the Durbar, and who are precluded by their duties at ordinary times from meeting, to discuss together many matters of the highest administrative importance, and to compare ideas on points of policy or practice in a way which, within the narrow limits of their own Provinces, would have been impossible. We are confident that there was not an officer present, British or Indian, who did not feel a sense of pride at serving the Government of an Empire so vast and beneficent, or who did not carry away with him the stimulus of an added zeal to give of his best to the service of his Sovereign and country.

22. But the Durbar did not produce its effect only on those who were able to attend. We have reason to believe that the great mass of the people of India, whether in British territory or in the States under His Majesty's protection, were profoundly impressed by the report of the ceremonies that took place, and that their imaginations were not untouched by the great idea of which these were but the outward form. Local celebrations were held everywhere throughout the country on the same day; and even the humblest participant can hardly have failed to entertain some conception of a national unity achieved under the firm but kindly sway of the British sceptre, and carrying with it the privileges of common citizenship in a world-wide Empire. In other ways, too, the event was brought home to the minds of the populace. By an act of grace 16,188 prisoners were released from British Indian Jails, and similar clemency was shown in the majority of the Native States. Nor must we omit to mention in this connection the impetus which was given to internal trade, more especially in the Native States, by the requirements of an assembly on so vast a scale as that recently held, and for those of the very numerous local celebrations.

23. Upon the effect of the Durbar beyond the limits of India, we are not in a position to pronounce with authority, but from the references to it contained in the newspapers of all countries, we are entitled to believe that it was very great and that the outside world has thereby been enabled to form a more correct idea of the scale and polity of our Indian Empire, to judge of the difficulties that have been met and surmounted in its creation, and to realise the power and prestige which must attach to the State, that for the first time in history has not only succeeded in moulding into a single whole the scattered and often warring atoms, which hitherto formed the congeries of countries and peoples included within the Indian continent, but has also by the justice and high purpose of its administration infused the entire mass with a spirit of devotion to a common Sovereign.

24. Of the honours, favours, and concessions, by which the occasion was marked, a complete list will be found in the Gazette Extraordinary of the 1st January. We have already alluded to the promotions in, and appointments to, the Orders of the Bath, the Star of India and the Indian Empire, and to the honours of Knighthood conferred by His Majesty. His Majesty was graciously pleased also to award 15 Kaiser-i-Hind Medals of the 1st class and 18 of the 2nd class. Further honours, reserved for Chiefs only, consisted of the addition of 2 guns to the permanent salute of the Nawab of Janjira, the grant of permanent salutes of 9 guns to the Sawbwas of Keng Tung, Mong Nai and Hsi Paw, who are the three principal Shan Chiefs, and the grant of personal salutes of 9 guns each to the Chiefs of Bhor and Danta and to Nawab Sir Amir-ud-din Ahmed Khan Bahadur, K.C.I.E., of Loharu.

The British officers of the Indian Army were intensely gratified by the grant to them of that designation, while the Native officers equally appreciated the announcement that six of their number would be annually appointed as orderly officers in attendance upon His Majesty. Other favours to the Army included the addition of 20 appointments to the first class and 60 to the second class of the Order of British India, the grant of honorary rank, on retirement, to native officers in possession of that decoration, the grant of extra meritorious service medals and extra long service and good conduct medals, with gratuities in each case, money grants to all British and Native Corps, the grant of special privileges to the Native Mountain Artillery, and the release or mitigation of punishment of various classes of military offenders. His Highness the Raja of Nabha received the honorary rank of Colonel of the 14th (Ferozepore) Sikh Infantry, and His Highness the Maharao of Kota the honorary rank of Major in the Deoli Irregular Force, whose head-quarters adjoin his State.

Various civil titles were conferred by His Excellency the Viceroy on distinguished Native gentlemen, and in six very special cases grants of land or inams were bestowed. We have already alluded to the release of prisoners in British India. In the Viceroy's speech, in addition to certain measures of financial relief to those Native States which had suffered from famine, was foreshadowed the very considerable reduction of taxation that was definitely announced in the Budget three months later, and that will always be associated by the people with the year of His Majesty's Coronation.

25. We should be guilty of an inexcusable omission if we did not acknowledge the devotion and ability with which the many duties connected with the Durbar were discharged. From first to last the preparations proceeded rapidly and harmoniously, every programme for the Durbar fortnight was carried out without a hitch, and the difficult task of winding up the Camp was expeditiously and satisfactorily performed, the final meeting of the Committees being held on the 10th April.

Where all did so well, it is difficult to particularise; but the following names appear to call for particular notice. Our cordial thanks are due to the Central and Executive Committees. Of the former, we must specially mention Sir Hugh Barnes, the President, and Major-General G. Henry: and of the latter, Captain A. D Bannerman, the Secretary, and Major H. Hudson. Mr Gordon Walker and Major M. W. Douglas combined their membership of these Committees with other arduous duties as Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner of Delhi, similarly Colonel H. F. Lyons-Montgomery of the Executive Committee was also the Officer of the Supply and Transport Corps, who was responsible for the very complete Commissariat arrangements.

To Lieutenant-Colonel C. J. Bamber, as Sanitary Commissioner, and Lieutenant-Colonel H. B. Thornhill, as Executive Sanitary Officer, is chiefly due, under Providence, the immunity of the Camp from any serious outbreak of disease, though plague was rife over the greater part of the Continent, and, but for the precautions taken, there would certainly have been danger of cholera. From the time the Camp was started in July 1902, there were altogether ten cases of plague, of which nine were imported, but the arrangements effectually prevented the disease from taking hold.

Rai Bahadur Ganga Ram was in executive charge of the numerous public works, including the building of the Amphitheatre, the structural additions in the Fort, the construction of roads, and the provision of the water-supply. The electric installation for the Fort was undertaken by Messrs. Osler & Co., and that for the Central Camp by Messrs. Kilburn & Co. The latter included 100 arc lights, and more than 8,000 incandescent lamps disposed among the various tents. We can pay no higher compliment to the efficiency of the work done by the firm under the supervision of Major A. M. Stuart and Captain C. O. Halliday, R.E., than to say that during the month for which the light was employed there was not a single failure.

The postal arrangements included 16 special offices and numerous pillar boxes, and were satisfactorily carried out by Rai Bahadur Daulat Ram, C.I.E., under the supervision of the Postmaster-General of the Punjab. The Telegraph Department, under Mr. O. Lees, opened 11 telegraph offices and a telephone exchange with 25 branches to the more important camps; it gave general satisfaction, the facilities afforded to the Press being, we understand, particularly appreciated.

The Punjab Police under the orders of Mr. C. Brown, the Inspector-General, added to their well-earned reputation by the excellence of their arrangements for the regulation of traffic and the prevention of disorder and crime. Their powers of suppression were never called into action, as disorder and crime were non-existent.

The light railway constructed and managed by Captain H. A. L. Hepper, R.E., proved of the greatest service. The efforts of the main lines to meet the very heavy traffic incidental to the Durbar also deserve recognition. Crowding and some delay were inevitable, and the difficulty of preventing these was enhanced by the awkward and confined situation of the Delhi main station, into which most of the traffic had perforce to be brought. The experience gained will doubtless lead to improved arrangements on any future occasion of the kind, while the remodelling of the station on the present occasion has been a great advantage to what has now become the centre of the Indian Railway system.

We have already alluded to the striking success with which the programmes of the various ceremonies were carried out. Sir Hugh Barnes was in immediate charge of all matters of ceremonial. Of the staff which ably assisted him, he has specially brought to our notice the name of Mr. R. Hughes-Buller of the Indian Civil Service. The ticket arrangements were successfully undertaken by Mr. W. E. Jardine, also of the Civil Service.

Of the amusements provided for visitors, the Club and the Polo Tournament, organised by Colonel the Hon'ble E. Baring, Military Secretary to the Viceroy, were deservedly popular.

Interesting notes by the officers in charge of the various branches of the arrangements are included among the enclosures with this despatch.

26. As regards the expenditure from public revenues on the Durbar, we are not yet in a posision to give final figures for certain of the heads included in the actual cost. Our most recent calculations were stated in paragraphs 138 to 140 of Part II of the Financial Statement for 1903-1904, where it was shown that the aggregate net charge to Imperial Revenues seemed unlikely to exceed Rs. 12,61,000, while the net charge against Provincial Revenues was estimated at Rs. 14,83,000, or a total under the two headings of about £180,000. It is possible that the credit side of the account may be increased by further recoveries, and a close scrutiny of the charges debited to the Durbar, which has been taken in hand, may show that some items ought properly to be debited to ordinary heads of expenditure. On the other hand, some difficulty has been experienced in distributing the total military expenditure, which has shown a considerable excess over the original forecast, between the Durbar and the manœuvres that preceded it; and we have not yet completed the enquiries which will enable us to apply a fair and reasonable principle of division.

27. In accordance with His Majesty's Command, special gold and silver medals were struck in honour of the occasion, the head of His Majesty being depicted on the one side, and a suitable inscription in the Persian character on the other. We are now engaged in distributing these medals to the principal official participators in the Durbar, and to selected officers and men of the British and Indian armies who were present. The gold medals are for presentation to the Ruling Chiefs and a few high officers of Government. The total of the silver medals is about 2,500.

28. In a supplementary despatch we propose to send, for Your Lordship's information, copies of reports which we have called for from the various Local Governments and Administrations as to the local celebrations of the Coronation that were held throughout India on the same day as the Delhi Durbar, viz., 1st January 1903.

We have the honour to be,

MY LORD,

Your Lordship's most obedient, humble Servants,

SPEECH DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY AT THE OPENING OF THE ART EXHIBITION, 30TH DECEMBER 1902.

YOUR ROYAL HIGHNESSES, YOUR HIGHNESSES, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—It is now my pleasant duty to proceed to the first of the functions of the present fortnight, and to declare open the Delhi Art Exhibition. A good many of our visitors would scarcely believe that almost everything that we see before us, except the trees, is the creation of the last eight months. When I came here in April last to select the site, there was not a trace of this great building, of these terraces, and of all the amenities that we now see around. They have all sprung into existence for the sake of this Exhibition, and though the effects of the Exhibition will, I hope, not be so quickly wiped out, the mise en scène is, I am sorry to say, destined to disappear.

Perhaps you will expect me to say a few words about the circumstances in which this Exhibition started into being. Ever since I have been in India I have made a careful study of the art industries and handicrafts of this country, once so famous and beautiful, and I have lamented, as many others have done, their progressive deterioration and decline. When it was settled that we were to hold this great gathering at Delhi, at which there would be assembled representatives of every Province and State in India, Indian Princes and Chiefs and Nobles, high officials, Native gentlemen, and visitors from all parts of the globe, it struck me that here at last was the long-sought opportunity of doing something to resuscitate these threatened handicrafts, to show to the world of what India is still capable, and, if possible, to arrest the process of decay. I accordingly sent for Dr. Watt, and I appointed him my right hand for the purpose Far and wide throughout India have he and his Assistant, Mr. Percy Brown, proceeded, travelling thousands of miles, everywhere interviewing the artisans, selecting specimens, giving orders, where necessary supplying models, and advancing money to those who needed it. Three conditions I laid down to be observed like the laws of Medes and Persians—

First, I stipulated that this must be an Arts Exhibition, and nothing else. We could easily have given you a wonderful show illustrating the industrial and economic development of India. Dr. Watt has such an exhibition, and a very good one too, at Calcutta. We could have shown you timbers, and minerals, and raw stuffs, and hides, and manufactured articles, to any extent that you pleased. It would all have been very satisfying but also very ugly. But I did not want that. I did not mean this to be an Industrial or Economic Exhibition. I mean it to be an Arts Exhibition, and that only.

My second condition was that I would not have anything European or quasi-European in it. I declined to admit of those horrible objects, such as lamps on gorgeous pedestals, coloured glass lustres, or fantastics statuettes, that find such a surprising vogue among certain classes in this country, but that are bad anywhere in the world, and worst of all in India, which has an art of its own. I laid down that I wanted only the work that represented the ideas, the traditions, the instincts, and the beliefs of the people. It is possible that a few articles that do not answer to my definition may have crept in, because the process of Europeanisation is going on space in this country, and the number of teapots, cream jugs, napkin rings, salt cellars, and cigarette cases that the Indian artisan is called upon to turn out is appalling. But, generally speaking, my condition has been observed.

Then my third condition was that I would only have the best. I did not want cheap cottons and wax-cloths, vulgar lacquer, trinkets and tinsel, brass gods and bowls made to order in Birmingham, or perhaps made in Birmingham itself. What I desired was an exhibition of all that is rare, characteristic, or beautiful in Indian art, our gold and silver ware, our metal work and enamels, and jewelry, our carving in wood and ivory, and stone, our best pottery and tiles, our carpets of old Oriental patterns, our muslins and silks and embroideries, and the incomparable Indian brocades. All of these you will see inside this building. But please remember it is not a bazar, but an exhibition. Our object has been to encourage and revive good work, not to satisfy the requirements of the thinly lined purse.

Such is the general character of the exhibition. But we have added to it something much more important. Conscious that taste is declining and that many of our modern models are debased and bad, we have endeavoured to set up alongside the products of the present the standards and samples of the past. This is the meaning of the Loan Collection, which has a hall to itself, in which you will see many beautiful specimens of old Indian artware, lent to us by the generosity of Indian Chiefs and connoisseurs, some of it coming from our own Indian Museums, and some from the unrivalled collection in the South Kensington Museum in London. Many of these objects are beautiful in themselves: but we hope that the Indian workmen who are here, and also the patrons who employ them, will study them not merely as objects of antiquarian or even artistic interest, but as supplying them with fresh or rather resuscitated ideas which may be useful to them in inspiring their own work in the future. For this may be laid down as a truism, that Indian art will never be revived by borrowing foreign ideals, but only by fidelity to its own.

And now I may be asked, what is the object of this Exhibition, and what good do I expect to result from it? I will answer in a very few words. In so far as the decline of the Indian arts represents the ascendancy of commercialism, the superiority of steam power to hand power, the triumph of the test of utility over that of taste, then I have not much hope. We are witnessing in India only one aspect of a process that is going on throughout the world, that has long ago extinguished the old manual industries of England and that is rapidly extinguishing those of China and Japan. Nothing can stop it. The power-loom will drive out the hand-loom, and the factory will get the better of the workshop, just as surely as the steam car is superseding the horsed carriage, and as the hand-pulled punkah is being replaced by the electric fan. All that is inevitable, and in an age which wants things cheap, and does not mind their being ugly, which cares a good deal for comfort, and not much for beauty, and which is never happy unless it is deserting its own models and traditions, and running about in quest of something foreign and strange, we may be certain that a great many of the old arts and handicrafts are doomed.

There is another symptom that to my mind is even more ominous. I am one of those, as I have said, who believe that no national art is capable of continued existence unless it satisfies the ideals, and expresses the wants, of the nation that has produced it. No art can be kept alive by globe-trotters or curio-hunters alone. If it has got to that point, it becomes a mere mechanical reproduction of certain fashionable patterns: and when fashion changes, and they cease to be popular, it dies. If Indian art, therefore, is to continue to flourish, or is to be revived, it can only be if the Indian Chiefs and aristocracy and people of culture and high degree undertake to patronise it. So long as they prefer to fill their palaces with flaming Brussels carpets, with Tottenham Court Road furniture, with cheap Italian mosaics, with French oleographs, with Austrian lustres, and with German tissues and cheap brocades, I fear there is not much hope. I speak in no terms of reproach, because I think that in England we are just as bad in our pursuit of anything that takes our fancy in foreign lands. But I do say that if Indian arts and handicrafts are to be kept alive, it can never be by outside patronage alone. It can only be because they find a market within the country and express the ideas and culture of its people. I should like to see a movement spring up among the Indian Chiefs and nobility for the expurgation, or at any rate the purification, of modern tastes, and for a reversion to the old-fashioned but exquisite styles and patterns of their own country. Some day I have not a doubt that it will come. But it may then be too late.

If these are the omens, what then is the aim of this Exhibition, and what purpose do I think that it will serve? I can answer in a word. The Exhibition is intended as an object-lesson. It is meant to show what India can still imagine, and create, and do. It is meant to show that the artistic sense is not dead among its workmen, but that all they want is a little stimulus and encouragement. It is meant to show that for the beautification of an Indian house or the furniture of an Indian home, there is no need to rush to the European shops at Calcutta or Bombay, but that in almost every Indian State and Province, in most Indian towns, and in many Indian villages, there still survives the art, and there still exist the artificers who can satisfy the artistic, as well as the utilitarian, tastes of their countrymen, and who are competent to keep alive this precious inheritance that we have received from the past. It is with this object that Dr. Watt and I have laboured in creating this Exhibition; and in now declaring it open, it only remains for me to express the earnest hope that it may in some measure fulfil the strictly patriotic purpose for which it has been designed.

SPEECH DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY AT THE DELHI DURBAR ON 1ST JANUARY 1903.

YOUR ROYAL HIGHNESSES, PRINCES, AND PEOPLES OF INDIA,—Five months ago in London His Majesty King Edward VII, King of England and Emperor of India, was invested with the crown and sceptre of the English Kings. Only a few representatives of the Indian Empire had the good fortune to be present at that ceremony. To-day His Majesty has by his royal favour afforded an opportunity to all his Indian people to take part in similar rejoicings, and here, and elsewhere throughout India, are gathered together in honour of the event the Princes and Chiefs and Nobles, who are the pillars of his throne, the European and Indian officials who conduct his administration with an integrity and devotion to duty beyond compare, the Army, British and Native, which with such pre-eminent bravery defends his frontiers and fights his wars, and the vast body of the loyal inhabitants of India, of all races who, amid a thousand varieties of circumstance and feeling and custom, are united in their spontaneous allegiance to the Imperial Crown. It was with the special object of thus solemnising his Coronation in India that His Majesty commanded me, as his Viceroy, to convene this great Durbar, and it is to signify the supreme value that he attaches to the occasion that he has honoured us by deputing his own brother, His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, to join in this celebration.

It is 26 years since, on the anniversary of this day, in this city of Imperial memories and traditions, and on this very spot, Queen Victoria was proclaimed the first Empress of India. That act was a vindication of her profound interest in her Indian subjects, and of the accomplished unity of her Indian dominions under the paramountcy of the British Crown. To-day, a quarter of a century later, that Empire is not less but more united. The sovereign to whom we are met to render homage is not less dear to his Indian people, for they have seen his features, and heard his voice. He has succeeded to a throne not only the most illustrious, but the most stable in the world; and ill-informed would be the critic who would deny that not the least of the bases of its security—nay, I think, a principal condition of its strength—is the possession of the Indian Empire, and the faithful attachment and service of His Majesty's Indian people. Rich in her ancient traditions, India is also rich in the loyalty which has been kindled anew in her by the West. Amid the crowd of noble suitors who, through all the centuries, have sought her hand, she has given it only to the one who has also gained her trust.

Nowhere else in the world would such a spectacle be possible as that which we witness here to-day. I do not speak of this great and imposing assemblage, unparalleled as I believe it to be. I refer to that which this gathering symbolises, and those to whose feelings it gives expression. Over 100 rulers of separate States, whose united population amounts to 60 millions of people, and whose territories extend over 55 degrees of longitude, have come here to testify their allegiance to their common sovereign. We greatly esteem the sentiments of loyalty that have brought them to Delhi from such great distances, and often at considerable sacrifice; and I shall presently be honoured by receiving from their own lips their message of personal congratulation to the King. The officers and soldiers present are drawn from a force in India of nearly 230,000 men, whose pride it is that they are the King's Army. The leaders of Indian society, official and unofficial, who are here, are the mouthpieces of a community of over 230 million souls. In spirit therefore and one may almost say, through their rulers and deputies, in person, there is represented in this arena nearly one-fifth of the entire human race. All are animated by a single feeling and all bow before a single throne. And should it be asked how it is that any one sentiment can draw together these vast and scattered forces and make them one, the answer is that loyalty to the sovereign is synonymous with confidence in the equity and benignity of his rule. It is not merely the expression of an emotion, but the record of an experience and the declaration of a belief. For to the majority of these millions the King's Government has given freedom from invasion and anarchy; to others it has guaranteed their rights and privileges; to others it opens ever widening avenues of honourable employment; to the masses it dispenses mercy in the hour of suffering; and to all it endeavours to give equal justice, immunity from oppression, and the blessing of enlightenment and peace To have won such a dominion is a great achievement. To hold it by fair and righteous dealing is a greater. To weld it by prudent statesmanship into a single and compact whole will be and is the greatest of all.

Such are the ideas and aims that are embodied in the summoning of this Coronation Durbar. It is now my duty to read to you the gracious message which His Majesty has desired me to convey to his Indian people:—

> "It gives me much pleasure to send a message of greeting to my Indian people, on the solemn occasion when they are celebrating my Coronation. Only a small number of the Indian Princes and representatives were able to be present at the Ceremony which took place in London; and I accordingly instructed my Viceroy and Governor-General to hold a great Durbar at Delhi, in order to afford an opportunity to all the Indian Princes, Chiefs, and Peoples, and to the Officials of my Government, to commemorate this auspicious event. Ever since my visit to India in 1875, I have regarded that Country and its Peoples with deep affection: and I am conscious of their earnest and loyal devotion to my House and throne. During recent years many evidences of their attachment have reached me: and my Indian Troops have rendered conspicuous services in the Wars and Victories of my Empire.
> "I confidently hope that my beloved Son, the Prince of Wales, and the Princess of Wales, may before long be able to make themselves personally acquainted with India and the Country which I have always desired that they should see and which they are equally anxious to visit. Gladly would I have come to India upon this eventful occasion myself had this been found possible. I have, however, sent my dear Brother, the Duke of Connaught, who is already so well known in India, in order that my family may be represented at the Ceremony held to celebrate my Coronation.

"My desire, since I succeeded to the Throne of my revered Mother, the late Queen Victoria, the First Empress of India, has been to maintain unimpaired the same principles of humane and equitable administration which secured for her in so wonderful a degree the veneration and affection of her Indian Subjects. To all my Feudatories and Subjects throughout India, I renew the assurance of my regard for their liberties, of respect for their dignities and rights, of interest in their advancement, and of devotion to their welfare, which are the supreme aim and object of my rule, and which, under the blessing of Almighty God, will lead to the increasing prosperity of my Indian Empire, and the greater happiness of its People."

Princes and Peoples of India, these are the words of the Sovereign whose Coronation we are assembled to celebrate. They provide a stimulus and an inspiration to the officers who serve him, and they breath the lessons of magnanimity and good will to all. To those of us who, like my colleagues and myself, are the direct instruments of His Majesty's Government, they suggest the spirit that should guide our conduct and infuse our administration. Never was there a time when we were more desirous that that administration should be characterised by generosity and lenience. Those who have suffered much deserve much; and those who have wrought well deserve well. The Princes of India have offered us their soldiers and their own swords in the recent campaigns of the Empire; and in other struggles, such as those against drought and famine they have conducted themselves with equal gallantry and credit. It is difficult to give to them more than they already enjoy, and impossible to add to a security whose inviolability is beyond dispute. Nevertheless, it has been a pleasure to us to propose that Government shall cease to exact any interest for a period of three years upon all loans that have been made or guaranteed by the Government of India to Native States in connection with the last famine, and we hope that this benefaction may be acceptable to those to whom it is offered. Other and more numerous classes there are in this great country to whom we would gladly extend, and to whom we hope before long to be in a position to announce, relief. In the midst of a financial year it is not always expedient to make announcements, or easy to frame calculations. If, however, the present conditions continue, and if, as we have good reason to believe, we have entered upon a period of prosperity in Indian finance, then I trust that these early years of His Majesty's reign may not pass by without the Government of India being able to demonstrate their feelings of sympathy and regard for the Indian population by measures of financial relief, which their patient and loyal conduct in years of depression and distress renders it especially gratifying to me to contemplate. I need not now refer to other acts of consideration or favour which we have associated with the present occasion since they are recorded elsewhere. But it is my privilege to make the announcement to the officers of the Army that henceforward the name of the Indian Staff Corps will cease to exist, and that they will belong to the single and homogeneous Indian Army of the King.

Princes and Peoples, if we turn our gaze for a moment to the future, a great development appears with little doubt to lie before this country. There is no Indian problem, be it of population or education or labour or subsistence, which it is not in the power of statesmanship to solve. The solution of many is even now proceeding before our eyes. If the combined arms of Great Britain and India can secure continued peace upon our borders, if unity prevails within them, between princes and people, between European and Indian, and between rulers and ruled, and if the seasons fail not in their bounty, then nothing can arrest the march of progress. The India of the future will, under Providence, not be an India of diminishing plenty, of empty prospect, or of justifiable discontent; but one of expanding industry, of awakened faculties, of increasing prosperity, and of more widely distributed comfort and wealth. I have faith in the conscience and the purpose of my own country; and I believe in the almost illimitable capacities of this. But under no other conditions can this future be realised than the unchallenged supremacy of the paramount power, and under no other controlling authority is this capable of being maintained than that of the British Crown.

And now I will bring these remarks to a close. It is my earnest hope that this great assemblage may long be remembered by the peoples of India as having brought them into contact at a moment of great solemnity with the personality and the sentiments of their Sovereign. I hope that its memories will be those of happiness and rejoicing, and that the reign of King Edward VII, so auspiciously begun, will live in the annals of India and in the hearts of its people. We pray that, under the blessing of the Almighty Ruler of the Universe, his sovereignty and power may last for long years, that the well-being of his subjects may grow from day to day, that the administration of his officers may be stamped with wisdom and virtue, and that the security and beneficence of his dominion may endure for ever.

Long live the King, Emperor of India!

STATE BANQUET AT DELHI, 1ST JANUARY 1903.

[On the evening of Thursday, the 1st January 1903, His Excellency the Viceroy entertained at a State Banquet in his Camp at Delhi, His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, and a large and distinguished Company. His Excellency in proposing the toast of the King-Emperor after dinner spoke as follows:—]

Your Royal Highnesses, Your Excellencies, My Lords, and Gentlemen,—I rise to propose the health of His Majesty the King, Emperor of India. This afternoon we carried through, I hope with success, the great ceremony that had been devised for the celebration of His Majesty's Coronation in this country, and the spectacle was one that must have stirred the heart of every beholder. It brought home to every European or Indian inhabitant of this land the vivid reality of the constitution under which we live, and by which a far away and invisible mainspring guides with resistless energy and power every movement of this vast political machine; and I hope that it may also have impressed our various illustrious visitors and guests with the conviction that this Indian possession of His Majesty is no mere dead-weight tied on to the heels of the British Empire, but a Dominion, a Continent, an Empire by itself, rich in its own personality and memories, self-confident it its own strength, and aglow with abundant potentialities for the future. To be King of the United Kingdom and of the British possessions beyond the Seas is a great and noble title. But to be Emperor of India is in no respect less, and is in some respects greater. For powerful Empires existed and flourished here, while Englishmen were still wandering painted in the woods, and when the British Colonies were wilderness and jungle; and India has left a deeper mark upon the history, the philosophy, and the religion of mankind than any other territorial unit in the universe. That a British Sovereign should in the fulness of time have been able to do what no predecessor of his ever accomplished, what Alexander never dreamed of, what Akbar never performed, namely, to pacify, unify, and consolidate this great mass into a single homogeneous whole, is, in my judgment, the most impressive phenomenon in history, and the greatest wonder of the modern world.

Your Royal Highnesses, Your Excellencies, and Gentlemen, I venture to say that but one regret has filled all our minds here to-day. It is that His Majesty the King-Emperor has not been able to be present here in person to receive the homage of his loyal Feudatories and the acclamations of his Indian people. There is, indeed, no necessity for an Emperor of India to come out here to be crowned. His Majesty was our acknowledged and sovereign lord as soon as the throne was vacant nearly two years ago. But India would dearly have loved to see the face of her Emperor and to listen to his voice: and some day we may hope that, as time and distance continue to dwindle under the magic finger of science, it may be found possible for the Viceroy on some future occasion like the present to be eliminated as a superfluous phantom, and for the real figure to appear upon the scene.

However that may be, we are met here in honour of a Sovereign who, though he may be absent in person, is with us in spirit, and whose royal message, which I had the privilege of reading this afternoon, shows how proud he is of the allegiance, and how devoted to the interests, of his Indian people. At the Durbar it was my duty to address more particularly the various classes of His Majesty's Feudatories and subjects who had assembled to render him their homage and to listen to his words. But the presence at this table here to-night of so many illustrious representatives of foreign Powers and of eminent persons from all quarters of the globe, enables me to point to the fact that the possession of India draws with it other and outside responsibilities, and brings us into relation, I am glad to say, peaceful and amicable relation, with all the Powers and Principalities of the East. We are honoured here by the company of a distinguished representative of the great and allied Empire of Japan, and by an Envoy from that enlightened monarch the King of Siam; and at our Durbar there were present to-day the Envoys or representatives of our friend and ally the Amir of Afghanistan, of the friendly Kingdom of Nepal, and of the Sultan of Muscat. Among our guests are the Governors-General of the Indian possessions of two powerful and allied nations, France and Portugal, with whom our relations are those of unbroken peacefulness and concord. Further, there have appeared for the first time at a gathering such as this, representatives of those great British Colonies beyond the seas, Australia and South Africa, whose star is destined to rise ever higher and higher, and whose Governments, as time passes on, must be brought into still closer connection with our own. Finally, we have here prominent Members of the Imperial Legislature, of the British Lords and Commons, who have journed across the ocean to join hands with us in this great ceremonial. I think I am entitled, therefore, to claim that it is no mere local celebration, but a great and Imperial solemnity of far-reaching interest and application, that we have been enacting to-day, and it is before an audience that is typical of all that is best in the British Empire, of our established dominion in Asia, of the friendly sentiments of our neighbours, and of the sympathetic regard of our own kith and kin across the seas, that I now propose my toast.

I give you all, Gentlemen, with feelings of profound respect, of devotion, and of enthusiasm, the health of His Majesty the King, Emperor of India.

The Viceroy then rose to propose the health of His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught. His Excellency said:—]

Your Royal Highnesses, Your Excellencies, My Lords, and Gentlemen,—There is only one other toast that I shall present to you this evening. I said just now how greatly His Majesty the King-Emperor had regretted that he could not be present here in person at the celebration of his own Coronation. But as this was impossible, His Majesty took the one step that, had there been a plebiscite on the subject in India, we should all have voted for unanimously—namely, he deputed a member of the Royal Family, a near relative of his own, to represent his family on this occasion; and—the Prince and Princess of Wales finding it impossible to visit India in the present winter, though we hope that that is an honour only for a little while delayed—His Majesty's choice fell upon his Royal brother, the Duke of Connaught, whose presence at the ceremony to-day, and here again to-night, is regarded by all of us with quite exceptional pleasure and delight. These are our feelings, both because we regard His Royal Highness's visit as testifying in the most unmistakeable way to the attitude and interest of the Sovereign, and also because there is no Prince, I might go further and say no officer—for after all His Royal Highness has been one of ourselves, and has served the Crown in India—who has more endeared himself to the people of all classes in this country, to soldiers and civilians, to Europeans and Natives, than His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught. He comes back to us, therefore, not merely as the delegate of our illustrious Sovereign, but as the old friend whom all India reveres and loves; and, if I may be permitted to diverge for one moment from the strict track of my toast, I would add that these sentiments on our part are enhanced by the knowledge that His Royal Highness has brought with him the gracious Princess whose popularity in India is not second even to his own. May I also say, though it is not perhaps absolutely germane to my toast, with what pleasure we see here another member of the Royal Family, His Royal Highness the Grand Duke of Hesse, himself a reigning sovereign, and a grandson of our late Queen, who has honoured us by joining our company, and whose presence is a compliment and a delight to us all.

And now, to revert to the subject of my toast, I hope that His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught will carry away to His Majesty the King a favourable impression of the prosperity and loyalty of his great Indian dominion. I can assure him that we regard it as the highest honour that he should have come out to be with us on this momentous occasion. When our Delhi functions are over, we hope to arrange for him a pleasant tour through the scenes and among the people to whom he is so much attached; and when he sails away from our shores, I hope that India will always keep the firm and agreeable resting-place in his memory that the Duchess and he already occupy, and will by their present visit confirm, in the affections of Europeans and Indians alike in this country.

Gentlemen, I ask you to join with me in drinking the good health, pleasant journey, and safe return of our illustrious guest, His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught.

His Royal Highness, who, on rising to respond to the toast, was very warmly received, said:—]

Your Excellencies, Your Royal Highness, My Lords, and Gentlemen,—I am indeed very sensible of the very kind manner in which you have proposed my health on this great and auspicious day. I can assure you that it was a great pleasure and satisfaction to myself when His Majesty the King informed me that it was his wish to send me out to India for the Coronation Durbar to represent his own family. I never expected that I should have such good fortune. My soldiering days now are cast in a very different climate. Ireland is a very different place from India, and Dublin is a very different place from Delhi, and I was never more astonished than I was on being told that I should come out to India again It is a great pleasure to me to come—a pleasure to come again to a country to which anybody at all interested and having served the Crown in it, must feel deeply attached.

There is also the feeling—I must say a somewhat sorrowful one—that when I was here before I had the good fortune to serve under three Viceroys and two Commanders-in-Chief, and that now I am no longer connected with India, except in my heart. But I think it requires very little assurance from me that I do, and always shall, take the very deepest interest in everything that affects the happiness and prosperity and the greatness of His Majesty's Indian Empire.

I have many friends here, both British and Native, and to see them again—to see them well and getting on in the world—is a great satisfaction to me; and what specially gives me pleasure is to meet the Native Army once again. As you know, Sir, I was first connected with the Bengal Army, as it was then; in this Command—the Meerut Division—and with that of the Rawal Pindi Division; after that for nearly four years, I had the Command of the Bombay Army, and, therefore, I may say that my interests are Indian, and not confined to one Presidency or another. But during the twelve years since I was in India, the Indian troops have taken their share in the defence of our frontiers and of our interests both in India and beyond the seas, and I am happy to think that whether it was in Africa, whether it was in China, or whether it was on the frontiers of India, every branch of the Indian Army has known how to maintain its reputation, and I can say with confidence that the Indian Army is respected by the armies of all other nations. It is a bad day for any Army when it does not get the chance of active service, and it would be especially so for the Indian Army if they were to be locked up year after year in their own country. However, this is a slight digression from the toast. May I be allowed to say for the Duchess of Connaught that she, equally with myself, rejoices to be again in India, and that she was very proud to be present at the ceremony of to-day; and may I also, with reference to Your Excellency's remarks about my nephew, the Grand Duke of Hesse, say how highly he appreciates the pleasure of visiting India and of being your guest, and further may I, on this New Year's Day, tell you, Lord Curzon, how grateful we all are for your great hospitality and for the very kind and cordial welcome you have given us.

I thank you all, Gentlemen, for the kind manner in which you have drunk my health.

REPORT BY THE SPECIAL MAGISTRATE, CORONATION CAMP, DELHI.

The cases decided between the 22nd November 1902 and the 31st January 1903 were as detailed in Appendix.

Considering the very large numbers of people in and near the Camps, the total number of cases, viz., 196, reads very well. Out of these no less than 187 were of a trivial nature and were tried summarily, leaving only nine regular trials.

2. Only two cases against soldiers came before me. In one case the man was convicted of running off with money from a gambling den, and in the other a soldier was charged with causing the death of a native. This man was acquitted on appeal, having been convicted under section 304A, Indian Penal Code, by the Magistrate (causing death by a rash act).

3. Looking to the enormous numbers of soldiers at Delhi during the Durbar period, this speaks well for the behaviour of the British troops, under circumstances of considerable temptation.

4. I had exceptional opportunities of watching the out-door work of the Punjab Police, and I was much struck at the very good work carried out by them, often under circumstances of extreme difficulty, especially as regards the regulation of traffic.

H. B. THORNHILL, Lieut.-Col.,

Special Magistrate, Coronation Camp, Delhi.

REPORT ON THE MEDICAL AND SANITARY ARRANGEMENTS, AND ON THE HEALTH OF THE CORONATION DURBAR CAMPS.

General.

In submitting this short report on the Sanitary and Medical History of the Central and Provincial Camps of the Coronation Durbar, it is satisfactory to be able to note that from the point of view of health, as well as in other respects, the assemblage has been a remarkable success.

The collection of such an enormous number of natives from all parts of India on one spot, which rendered the importation of many cases of disease not only possible but probable, was effected with the occurrence of a few cases of plague only which could be attributed to importation. These cases were all isolated, and did not act as foci for the spread of the disease. This immunity was owing to the excellence of the arrangements for the selection and inspection of all natives so carefully devised and carried out by the various Provincial Governments, and by the Officials of the various Native States, and to the efficient Railway Plague Inspections on all the lines entering Delhi.

Weather.

The weather also contributed greatly to the good health of the Durbar, both through the absence of rain, so usual at that season, and from the fact that the temperature was, for most of the time, from five to ten degrees above the mean.

Difficulties to be met.

The difficulties to be contended with in the creation of a large town of about 100,000 inhabitants with four suburbs of from five to ten thousand inhabitants each, on a bare plain among the fields, and the arrangements for the adequate supply of food, water, hospital accommodation, conservancy, etc., for them, were necessarily great. It therefore speaks volumes for the forethought and organising powers of the officials who have been toiling for the past six months at the formation of the camps, that all the arrangements worked so perfectly, and that no hitch occurred.

Food.

There was abundance of food, and the establishment of a public market by the Supply and Transport Department prevented prices in Delhi from rising much, if at all, above the normal.

Water-supply.

The supply of water in the Central Camps was unlimited. Drawn from the Jumna above Delhi, it was passed through the filter-beds of the Delhi water-works, and distributed through all the camps in pipes, so that contamination was impossible.

In the Provincial and Native Chiefs' Camps, which were too far from the Jumna for a pipe supply to be arranged for (except in the case of the Punjab and Rajputana Chiefs' Camps, where pipe water was supplied), wells were dug by the Durbar authorities, minute instructions were drawn up by the Administrative Medical and Sanitary Officer for the regulation and safeguarding of these wells by the supply of special vessels for the withdrawal of water, and by the posting of special guards over them to prevent chance contamination by unauthorized individuals.

The abundant supply of water enabled the Durbar authorities to combat and to a great extent remove the nuisance and discomfort arising from the dust, which is always so bad in Indian camps, by watering all the main roads. Roads within camp limits were kept watered by the camps themselves.

Medical and Sanitary Staff

The Medical and Sanitary arrangements were under the control of Lieutenant-Colonel C. J. Bamber, I.M.S., Sanitary Commissioner of the Punjab, as Administrative Medical and Sanitary Officer, with Major F. Wyville-Thomson, I.M.S., as Special Health Officer, and Captain C. H. James, I.M.S., as Special Plague Officer. Under these there was a staff of two Assistant Surgeons and eight Hospital Assistants.

Arrangements for each Camp.

In addition to the above Durbar Staff, the Camp of each Provincial Government and Native State brought its own Medical Officer and Subordinates, with tents and equipment for a small hospital capable of treating ordinary cases of sickness up to three per cent. of the population of each camp, with arrangements to extend up to seven per cent. if necessary. Daily sick reports were furnished to the Administrative Medical Officer by each camp from the 20th December to the 10th January.

Out-door Dispensary.

An out-door dispensary was established in the Central Camp in charge of a Hospital Assistant for the treatment of natives employed on the Durbar work from June 1902. In November it was removed to a supply house on the Alipur Road, where an Ambulance Station was also arranged. The latter was luckily never required, as owing to the excellent police management of the traffic, no serious carriage or other accident was reported. Considering the very crowded state of the main roads, this was most satisfactory.

This Dispensary proved very useful, and was largely attended, 5,000 cases being treated between the end of June and the end of January.

Civil Followers' Hospital.

In November a Civil Followers' Hospital of 32 beds was opened near Chandrawal village for all natives not otherwise arranged for, and any overflow cases from the Central Camps. It was built of thatched huts, and completely equipped with medicines and appliances, and had a staff of two Hospital Assistants and the usual servants.

Separate arrangements for the segregation and treatment of Infectious Diseases were made by the Durbar Medical Staff, who kept this branch under their own control, medical officers of Provincial Camps being directed to report all such cases to the Health or Plague Officer for removal to a Segregation Hospital.

Infectious Diseases.

To enable any outbreak of plague to be effectually dealt with, Special Plague Regulations for the Durbar area were issued by the Punjab Government, under Section 2 of the Epidemic Diseases Act (III of 1897), giving the Central Committee general control over plague operations, and detailing the steps to be taken and rules to be observed on the appearance of plague by the officials deputed by them.

Special Plague Regulations.

Four Segregation Hospitals, consisting of thatched huts of matting plastered over with mud, and fully equipped with beds, blankets, cooking vessels, lamps, etc., were erected at four different points.

Segregation Hospital.

One near Azadpur village was for cases occurring in the Central and Punjab Chiefs' Camps. It consisted of two wards for the accommodation of 28 plague patients, two wards of 4 beds each at some distance apart, for cholera or small-pox, observation ward, dispensary, store room, servants' quarters, etc., and a number of small huts for the segregation of contacts. It had a staff of one Hospital Assistant, Compounder, Matron, Bhisti, Sweeper and Cook

Similar but slightly smaller Segregation Hospitals were erected about a quarter of a mile from the Bombay and Rajputana Chiefs' Camps respectively, and another on the Rohtak Road, which was intended for cases coming from the Central India and United Provinces, Baroda, Mysore, Burma, Bengal and the other camps up to the Pembari Bridge. Each of these was in the charge of a Hospital Assistant with a staff of servants.

Of the two Assistant Surgeons employed, one was stationed at the Segregation Hospital at the Bombay Provincial Camp and the other at the out-door Dispensary on the Alipur Road. The latter was in charge of the Postal and Telegraph Establishments, and with the assistance of another Hospital Assistant, made a daily sanitary inspection of the Central Camps.

The instructions given to the medical officers of camps were that on the appearance of any illness suspected to be of an infectious character, they were to take immediate steps to isolate the case temporarily on the outskirts of their camp, and to inform the Durbar Medical Authorities, who would inspect and, if necessary, remove the patient and contacts to a Segregation Hospital, and carry out the required disinfection.

Instructions regarding infectious cases.

Most fortunately the above arrangements were never severely taxed, owing to the immunity of the Durbar from plague and other infectious diseases.

Only ten cases of plague occurred altogether in eight different camps. They were all menial natives, and recent arrivals, save one. They came in good health, but were evidently incubating the disease, and sickened from a few hours to a few days after arrival. The one exception was a man in the Bharatpur Imperial Service Transport, who had been a month in camp. The source of his infection could not be traced.

Plague cases.

Although there were thus eight separate foci for causing plague distributed widely over the camps, in no instance did a second case follow the original one. This was doubtless due to the open air life in tents, to the prompt recognition of the disease, and to the rapidity with which preventive measures were taken. It also supports the accepted theory that plague need not be feared in camps, and that the turning out of the inhabitants of infected villages into camp is a certain method of arresting the disease.

The ten cases of plague occurred in the following places:—

Their distribution.

Three coolies, who had arrived from Amritsar a few days before, were attacked simultaneously early in November. They were living along with fifty others in an old building in the Baroda Central Camp on the King's Road. The sick men were removed and the contacts segregated. No further cases occurred. The building was disinfected, and the doorways built up. One case was severe, the other two mild. They all recovered.

Single fatal cases occurred at the Punjab Chiefs', Baroda Provincial, Central India Chiefs', Volunteer, Transport Lines, and the Bharatpur Imperial Service Corps Camps. A plague-stricken man was found on the road near Azadpur by Captain James. He died and no information about him could be obtained.

With regard to other infectious diseases the Durbar was practically free from them. No cholera appeared, and there were five cases of small pox confined to the Military Camps, which were under the control of the Military Authorities.

Other infectious diseases.

As for general diseases, the camps were very healthy. Owing to the warm weather and freedom from rain and cold winds, chest diseases and pneumonia were not frequent or severe Camps coming from Southern India were warned of the necessity to bring extra warm clothing for their followers, and the large number of sweepers employed in the Conservancy Department were provided with blankets and tents. With neglect of these precautions, and adverse conditions of weather, the mortality from pneumonia among the followers in such a gathering might be very severe.

Number of cases

The total number of cases treated in the Chandrawal Civil Followers' Hospital, and reported by the Medical Officers of the different camps (excluding all the troops), for the period from the 20th December to the 10th of January, is given below; but as the Medical Officers in many instances included their out-patients in the returns, the figures shew a large excess over what were really serious cases in hospital—

	Cases	Deaths.
Malarial Fever	1,534	4
Pneumonia	365	22
Chest Diseases	1,570	11
Dysentery and Diarrhœa	548	3
All other causes	2,828	29

Conservancy.

Success of Arrangements.

The Conservancy arrangements, devised and carried out by Lieutenant-Colonel Thornhill, Executive Sanitary Officer and Special Magistrate for the Durbar, were a perfect success. It is only when one is actually concerned with this department that the magnitude of the task can be appreciated, and the greatest praise which can be bestowed on it was, as happened in this case, that things worked so smoothly and unobtrusively that they passed unnoticed. In no case was any objectionable sight or smell noticed, nor was a single serious complaint made. A liberal supply of latrines and of removal staff and plant insured the rapid disposal of the night-soil, and no accumulation ever occurred. Special roads, metalled and lighted, were made to the trenches, on which the carts worked all night, so that they were never in evidence.

Removal System

The Removal System was carried out in the whole of the Central Camps, and in the greater part of the Military Camps. This meant the removal and burial every night of the soil from an estimated population of 100,000 people. Trenches were dug at three spots on the outskirts of the camps, to which the night-soil was removed either in Crowley's carts, or the iron receptacles were removed bodily on trollies drawn by bullocks, emptied, washed, and brought back.

Trenches.

The trenches were in the form of shallow pits, one foot deep. The earth removed in digging them was pulverised by wooden mallets, and heaped on the side, so that as soon as a cart of filth was emptied into the trench spreading itself out to a depth of about three inches, the powdered earth was immediately thrown on the top. No smell was noticeable except when the carts were actually being emptied. It never penetrated through the earth, and the absence of flies from the pits testified to the thoroughness of the system. The carts or receptacles were then washed with Condy's Fluid or Phenyle, and the washings poured into a separate pit.

Latrines.

The latrines, which were usually made of mat screens, were furnished with a special pattern of double iron bucket devised by Lieutenant-Colonel Thornhill. These were so arranged with a semi-circular iron plate on the top for the feet of the performer that the urine and fæces were bound to pass into their own receptacles, and all soiling of the ground was thereby avoided. These buckets were then emptied into the receptacles, which were iron cylinders with double lids fixed by a clamp. They could be emptied into the Crowley's carts or removed when full on the trollies.

Each latrine had a separate compartment for washing in, to prevent the slopping of water the natives indulge in.

Urinals

It was found impossible to remove the water from the urinals, so these were made in the form of heaps or pits full of sawdust. They acted perfectly, as they absorbed an enormous quantity of urine, and no smell or unpleasantness ever resulted.

Provincial Camps Conservancy.

The Provincial Camps made their own Conservancy arrangements under the supervision of the Durbar Sanitary authorities, a circular with instructions on sanitary matters being issued to them by Lieutenant-Colonel Bambor. In these camps trench latrines were used, being constructed and served by the camp staff.

Numerous Police Patrols round all these camps prevented the soiling of the ground, and any chance contamination was removed from their outskirts by a body of sweepers from the Durbar Conservancy Staff told off for that purpose, under a Native Non-Commissioned Officer for each camp as Sanitary Inspector.

Central Camps Conservancy

In the Central Camps, each camp brought its own sweepers, who were responsible for the tent work and cleaning up of kitchens, stables, etc., and for the transporting of receptacles to central depôts, whence their contents were removed to the trenches by the Durbar Staff

Kitchen slops were disposed of in small absorption pits, filled with broken bricks; bath-water was poured out on flower-beds or lawns, and kitchen rubbish and stable-litter were collected in convenient spots for removal by the Durbar Conservancy Staff in carts.

Circulars.

Exact instructions were issued in printed circulars on all the above-mentioned points, and distributed to all Camps by the Medical and Sanitary Administrative Officer, and any instance of an insanitary condition in the Central Camps was found to be caused by the neglect of the Camp Authorities to carry out the directions given them, which in many cases were not adhered to as closely as they might have been.

Dhobies.

The large number of Dhobies employed in the Civil and Military Camps were not allowed to wash clothes inside their camps, or in the Najafgarh Canal. The Jumna below the intake of the water-works was set apart for their use. The Najafgarh Canal was used only for bathing and watering horses.

C. J. BAMBER, Lt.-Col., I.M.S.,

Sanitary Commissioner, Punjab,

and Administrative Medical Officer,

Dated the 2nd March 1903. Coronation Durbar, Delhi.

REPORT ON THE POLICE ARRANGEMENTS IN CONNECTION WITH THE CORONATION DURBAR AT DELHI.

1. In paragraphs 23 and 24 of the Resolution of the Government of India in the Foreign Department, No. 949-I A, dated the 7th March 1902, it was directed that the General Police arrangements in connection with the Coronation Durbar at Delhi should be placed under the control of the Punjab Government, and that, as regards the camps of the various Local Governments and Administrations, the Punjab Government should enquire direct whether these Governments would prefer to arrange for the protection of their camps themselves or to leave the arrangements in the hands of the Punjab Government.

2. Protection of Camps of other Provinces.—The Governments of Bengal, United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, the Central Provinces and Baluchistan elected to employ their own police for the protection of their camps, while the other provinces desired that the Punjab Government would undertake the responsibility.

With the exceptions above noted, the protection of the whole of the camps as well as all duties connected with law and order were entrusted to the Punjab Police

It was, however, subsequently arranged with the Government, which had placed the protection of their camps in the hands of the Punjab Government, that they should supply a small number of police for employment in the interior of their respective camps, but the responsibility for protection from without rested with the police of this province

3. Detective Police.—In accordance with the orders contained in paragraph 6 of Government of India, Home Department, letter No. 640, dated the 20th August 1902, Mr. McCracken, Assistant to the General Superintendent of Operations for Suppression of Thagi and Dakaiti, was placed directly under the Inspector-General of Police, Punjab, for the control of an establishment of detectives drawn from the police forces of all provinces in India. Mr. McCracken was subsequently relieved of this duty by Mr. H. L. Kemball.

4. Strength of the Police employed.—The attached statement A shows the strength of police employed on all duties in connection with the Durbar. It will be seen that of the total of—

36 Gazetted Officers,
165 Non-Gazetted Officers,
5,031 Sergeants and Constables,

the Punjab Police furnished—

29 Gazetted Officers,
105 Non Gazetted Officers, and the following particulars relate to the duties performed by the latter force.

3 European Deputy Inspectors.
88 Native Deputy Inspectors.
347 Sergeants.
70 Mounted Constables.
3,236 Constables.
1,441 Village Chaukidars.

Substitutes.—The districts from which the Non-Gazetted Officers and men were taken are shown in statement B-I, which also gives the number of substitutes entertained in the places of the constables withdrawn. The total number of substitutes was 2,500; they were employed on an average for two months at Rs. 7 per mensem.

Chaukidars, pay of.—The chaukidars received Rs. 7 per mensem while away from their villages, and local arrangements were made for their duties during their absence.

Period for which the Police were employed.—Statement B-II gives the dates on which the different parties of Police reached Delhi, the period spent there, and the dates of their return to their districts. It shows that while the total strength was present from 20th December to 11th January, the average for two months was—

20 Gazetted Officers.
87 Non-Gazetted Officers.
3,015 Sergeants and Constables.

Strength of Military Police.—The services of 20 non-commissioned officers and men of British Cavalry Regiments were borrowed from the Military authorities, 10 for 16 days and 10 for 13 days.

PART II.

Distribution and duties of the force.

6. Divisions formed.—Three Divisions were formed as shown below:—

No. of Division.	Officer in charge.	District Superintendent of Police.	Assistant District Supdt. of Police.	Inspectors.		Deputy Inspectors.		Sergeants.	Mounted Constables.	Foot Constables.	Chaukidars.	Military non-commissioned officers.

The 1st Division was posted to the Central and Military Camps;
The 2nd Division to the Provincial and Native Chiefs Camps; and
The 3rd Division to the City and suburbs of Delhi.

Details of the location and duties of each Division are given in statements C-I, II and III.

The area included in the three police Divisions was about 50 square miles.

Protective arrangements in Divisions.—In the 1st Division chaukidars were employed in picketing the Ridge and the space to the east of the Central Camps between the Ridge and the Najufgarh Canal, while all duties in the camps themselves were performed by Regular Police.

In the 2nd Division the Native Chiefs made their own arrangements for the protection of the interior of their camps, the only exception being in the case of the Gaekwar of Baroda, who was supplied with Regular Police for this duty. A cordon of chaukidars was posted round every group of camps, the pickets being 100 yards apart. Parties of police were employed as patrols and to supervise the chaukidars. This system of protection worked remarkably well, as not a single case of theft by outsiders was committed.

The strength of police in the 3rd Division is inclusive of the force ordinarily attached to the Delhi district. This Division was in charge of Mr. Dunsford, District Superintendent of Police, Delhi.

7. Investigation.—In accordance with the provisions of the Delhi Durbar Police Act, special police stations were created. In the 1st Division there were three such police stations.

In the 2nd Division the Provincial Camps were formed into five groups, in each of which a police station was located. In the 3rd Division two jurisdictions in addition to the ordinary municipal police stations were arranged for.

8. Crime reported.—Statement D shows the offences reported between the 15th December and 15th January with the figures for the corresponding period in 1901-1902.

Considering the great influx of visitors, the amount of valuables in their possession and the area over which the camps were spread, the remarkably small number of offences in excess of the ordinary crime of the locality, was very satisfactory.

This result was, in a great part, due to the activity of the Detective Agency who discovered, in and about Delhi, 180 persons from different parts of the country, all of whom had been previously convicted of offences against property. Fifty-one of the persons were ordered to furnish security and 16 were deported.

One case of murder was reported. The body was found on the bank of the Najufgarh Canal in a decomposed state. The medical report showed that the deceased had several ribs broken, but the body was not recognised, and no clue to the offender was obtained.

9. Regulation of Traffic.—The paucity of European Subordinate Officers and the fact that the native police, drawn from every district in the province, had had no previous experience in such duties at first caused much difficulty in the regulation of traffic on the main thoroughfares which were crowded with vehicles of all descriptions.

I applied to the military authorities for 20 non-commissioned officers of British Cavalry Regiments to be temporarily attached to the police from 23rd December, but it was not till 26th December that 10 men of the 15th Hussars were placed at my disposal. On 29th this number was increased by 10 men of the 9th Lancers. These non-commissioned officers and men proved most valuable. In the meantime the native police had learnt their duties, and by 1st January the traffic was fairly under control.

Gazetted Officers had not only to supervise but also to take an active part in performing these irksome duties.

The coachmen of the Native Chiefs and others imagined that they could ignore the authority of the police, and it was only by the exercise of much patience and firmness that the regulations could be enforced.

10. Motor Cars.—In the rules framed by the Punjab Government under section 7 (1) of the Delhi Durbar Police Act, every Motor Car had to be licensed by the Inspector-General of Police before being used within the area to which the Act applied.

I licensed 22 Motor Cars, most of which were petrol ones.

The points I was directed to pay attention to were the stopping and turning powers of the vehicle, the amount of noise it created and the ability of the driver to control the vehicle. The conditions of the license provided that the speed should not exceed eight miles an hour, that the vehicle should not be used between sunset and sunrise or on the days of the State Entry, the Durbar and the review of the troops.

No accidents occurred which could be attributed to Motor Cars.

I attach a list of the vehicles licensed (Statement E).

11. Ceremonials.—The attached statement marked F shows the number of police employed on the occasion of the State Entry, the Durbar and other public functions.

The reserve intended to provide for such duties was insufficient, and men had to be withdrawn from the protection of Camps, thus throwing extra work on those who remained in charge. On the day of the Durbar, the police were on duty from early in the morning till nearly sunset, and on the night of the State Ball from sunset to sunrise.

12. Parking of carriages.—The number of carriages parked on each of the great functions is given in Statement G.

The system of parking is explained in the extract from the Carriage Traffic Regulations for 1st January given in Appendix G. I.

The same system with slight modifications was adopted at all the other Great Functions. At the State Ball the carriage ticket numbers instead of being given to the coachmen were affixed to the lamp on the near side of each carriage.

The use of carriage tickets of colors, corresponding with the flags of the different parking grounds, with block numbers, worked very well, and there was no difficulty in ascertaining the position of any carriage on seeking the ticket in possession of the occupier of the carriage.

Some non-commissioned officers and men of British Infantry Regiments were employed in issuing carriage tickets at the arrival platforms; they proved most useful.

The difficulty in connection with the carriages occurred on the conclusion of the functions when everybody endeavoured to get away at once. But directly the main roads were reached, a proper line was established.

On the night of the illuminations there was necessarily much confusion when the public rushed to their carriages and blocked the roads of exit. There were, however, no serious accidents.

On future occasions it would, I think, be better for the fireworks to be viewed from the walls and glacis of the fort rather than from the Jumma Musjid.

In 1877 the display of fireworks was held soon after dark; the spectators reached their seats, and their carriages were parked by day light. On the 2nd January 1903, the darkness added very much to the difficulties of the police.

13. Accidents.—Eighteen accidents to natives were reported as having been caused by carriages or horses. Six of them ended fatally; in the others the injuries were not serious.

Nearly all of these cases occurred in the city and bazars. The only other fatal accident was that in which an elephant belonging to the Maharaja of Rewah killed its Mahout.

14. Fires.—Sixteen fires occurred in the different camps. The amount of damage done was slight.

The swords of the police employed in Camps had been sharpened, so that on the first alarm of fire they could cut the ropes of any neighbouring tents and thus prevent the fire from spreading.

15. Lost property.—One hundred and fifty-eight articles were reported lost, of which all but 90 were recovered.

PART III.

HEALTH AND CONDUCT OF THE FORCE.

16. Health.—Of the 3,263 officers and men of the Punjab Police deputed from other districts, 135 were admitted to hospital; there were eight deaths, all from pneumonia.

Of the 1,441 chaukidars, 15 were admitted to hospital, and 6 died.

The Civil Surgeon of Delhi placed at my disposal four hospital assistants, two of whom were employed in visiting the police in the different Camps

Two Gazetted Officers, Messrs. Dunsford and Baskett, were on the sick list for some days.

17. Tents for the Police and Chaukidars.—Particulars of the tents used are given in Statement H. Nearly every serviceable tent in possession of the Department was sent to Delhi.

Mr. Rundle, District Superintendent of Police, was appointed Quartermaster from 1st November. Prior to that date, Mr. Cocks, Assistant District Superintendent, acted in this capacity.

The Quartermaster had to receive and distribute all tents, to arrange for the carriage of the luggage of parties of police on arrival and departure from Delhi and to draw and distribute the pay of the force.

18. Conduct of the Force.—There was only one complaint of incivility on the part of the police. Discipline was well maintained, and the conduct of the police and the chaukidars was excellent. His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab authorised a reward of Rs. 1,000, which, with a similar sum given by the Central Committee, and Rs. 250 by the officer in charge of Visitors' Camp No. II, was distributed among the constables, each man receiving 10 annas.

The officers and men worked with much spirit. The duties of the officers were irksome and often required the exercise of much patience and good temper.

19. Notice of Officers.—When all did well it is invidious to make distinctions, but I must mention the names of Messrs. Hammond and Sydney Smith, Deputy Inspectors-General, also of Mr. French, who held charge of the 2nd Division till 15th December. Mr. Lake, my Personal Assistant, in addition to his ordinary duties, controlled traffic on several occasions.

Although the police of the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, Bengal, Central Provinces and Baluchistan took no part in the duties connected with law and order, they guarded their respective Camps most efficiently.

Mr. Bramley, District Superintendent of Police, in charge of the United Provinces Police, was most courteous and anxious to assist on every occasion.

Messrs. Tomkins and Stead, whose services were placed at my disposal by Mr. Hastings, C.I.E., Inspector-General of Police of the North-West Frontier Province, were employed on all duties and rendered valuable assistance.

I wish to bring very prominently to notice the excellent work done by Inspector Sandhe Khan, the Kotwal of Delhi, to whose tact and energy the success of the arrangements in the city was in a great measure due.

20. Rewards.—I have already recommended that the constables should receive double halting allowances or two annas instead of one anna per diem.

The village chaukidars worked remarkably well, and, as already mentioned, not a single theft was committed by outsiders in Camps guarded by them. I recommend that each of the 1,441 chaukidars be given a present of one rupee, and that the families of the six men who died at Delhi should received Rs. 10 each.

The Gazetted officers of the force had no Christmas holidays, and while other officers were enjoying themselves had to work day and night. I venture to suggest that the European members of the force should be given 15 days' special privilege leave on the condition attaching to the Mahsud Blockade Leave.

C. BROWN,
Inspector-General of Police, Punjab.

DELHI DURBAR LIGHT RAILWAY.

The Durbar Light Railway was constructed to facilitate the movement of the crowds of people, European and Native, attending the Durbar, to relieve the traffic on the roads and to keep down the price of hired conveyances.

The sites for the various camps had been fixed before the construction of a railway was decided on, and the alignment had therefore to be chosen more with reference to the positions of the camps than to considerations affecting the financial aspect of the project.

The Railway consisted of a main line laid from near the Kashmir Gate to the Polo Grounds with two branches—one to the Amphitheatre and the other to the Review Ground.

A plan is attached giving the general alignment and positions of stations. The main line, 4 miles long, was a double line with a single line loop at each of the termini. The terminal station at Kashmir Gate was situated on the loop and the other six main line stations were on the double line, the effect produced being that of a continuous circular railway of 8 miles circumference divided into 13 sections.

The length of the Amphitheatre branch from its junction with the main line was 1·78 miles, and the length of the Review Ground branch from its junction with the Amphitheatre Branch 1·45 miles. The total mileage was thus—

	Miles.
Double line	4·00
Single line	3·23

or 11·23 miles of single track.

In addition to which there were sidings for stabling Rolling Stock at Kashmir Gate, aggregating about ½ a mile. Both the branch lines were single, loops being formed at the termini.

The construction presented few difficulties from an engineering point of view, but the crossing of the line over the Ridge and the Bridge over the Najafgarh Canal, especially the former, were somewhat difficult in view of the short time available for the work.

The crossing of the Ridge entailed a mile of line on rough rocky ground, and the Ridge itself, at the point the line crossed it, presented an irregular mass of practically bare rock necessitating a large amount of blasting and the transport of earth for the embankment from a considerable distance. The Bridge over the Najafgarh Canal was a timber structure of 3 spans of 10′ each on piles driven into the bed of the canal. There were numerous culverts but they were all of small size.

The gauge was 2′ 6″; the permanent-way and rolling-stock being lent by the Military Authorities from their Light Railway Reserve stock. The General Service wagons, temporarily fitted with light garden seats to adapt them to passenger traffic, answered the purpose very well.

The construction was commenced on August 1st, 1902, and the line was opened for passenger traffic, at a maximum speed of 12 miles per hour, on December 1st, 1902, the work having been done by two Companies of the Sappers and Miners, supplemented by civil labour engaged locally and supervised by the officers of the Sappers Companies.

The stations consisted of temporary thatched buildings with low platforms enclosed with bamboo fencing. Signals and telegraphic communication were provided and the line was worked on the Absolute Block system to ensure the maximum of safety with high carrying capacity. The junction of the Amphitheatre branch with the main line was interlocked and the Main Line was fenced in places where it ran close to important roads. Signals, fencing material, water column, tanks, stores, etc., were borrowed from the North-Western Railway.

The trained traffic and locomotive staff was lent by the North-Western Railway, but British soldiers were used as Ticket Collectors and Platform Sergeants, and Police were provided by the Inspector-General, Railway Police, Lahore.

The Traffic Department was under the control of Lieutenant C. L. Magniac, R.E., of the Traffic Department of the North-Western Railway, and the Locomotive Department was in the hands of an experienced Locomotive Foreman, also lent by that railway.

A feature of the lines was the large number of level crossings over public and camp roads; there were 32 of these in all, mostly on the main line. Gates were provided to prevent accidents, and three of the more important level crossings were in charge of British soldiers in addition to the native gate-keepers.

Tickets were issued for any distance and were collected, before the passengers entered the train, at the entrance wicket by a British soldier, who at once placed the tickets in a locked box, on the principle adopted on the "Tube" railways in London. Season tickets were issued for the Durbar period only. The fares during the Durbar were Re. 1 first and 8 annas second class, but half these prices before and after the Durbar period.

The line was opened on December 1st with a few trains daily and a small staff, the number of trains and the staff being gradually increased to suit the requirements of the traffic.

In addition to the trains running on the main line a shuttle train was run daily between the Durbar Road junction and the Amphitheatre. The Review Ground branch was used on the day of the review only.

During the Durbar period trains were run on the main line at intervals of 15 minutes from 8 A.M. until 10 P.M.

The maximum number of trains run in one day was 92 on the main line (46 each way) and 16 (8 trips) on the Amphitheatre branch, or a total of 108 trains per day, equal to 406 train-miles.

The maximum number of passengers carried on any one day was 1,000 first (exclusive of season ticket-holders) and 8,354 second class passengers, and the maximum number of tickets issued at any one station was 224 first and 2,657 second class tickets.

The line was closed for traffic on January 18th, the total figures for working being as under:—

				Miles.
Total number of train miles run ...	...	...		8,567
				No.
Number of passengers carried, first	...	...		12,182
exclusive of season ticket-holders, second	...	...		89,916
				Rs.	A. P.
Receipts by sale of ordinary tickets	...	...		47,692	11 0
Receipts by sale of season tickets	...	...		20,530	0 0
Total earnings		...		68,222	11 0

The cost of constructing and working the line is given below:—

		Rs.	A.	P.
Cost of construction, including all staff and Locomotive charges prior to opening, carriage of permanent-way, engines, rolling-stock and stores to Delhi	...	71,430	0	0
Cost of working including staff and stores for working for 7 weeks, dismantling all staff and Locomotive charges subsequent to closing with carriage of permanent-way, engines, rolling-stock and stores from Delhi	...	54,462	0	0

The net cost of the railway was thus Rs. 57,633-5; but as out of this sum about Rs. 30,000 represents carriage charges (paid principally to the North-Western State Railway and thus a credit to the Government of India), the actual ultimate cost to the Government of India may be taken at under Rs. 30,000.

Although the line was open for seven weeks, there was a very small traffic before the Durbar, and it fell off again immediately afterwards. There was actually only about ten days' heavy traffic, but during these ten days the rush was very great and fully justified the precautions that had been taken in the way of solid construction, expensive trained staff, signals, fencing gates, etc.

In other words, the line had to be constructed, equipped and staffed on a scale enabling it to deal efficiently, and above all safely, with a traffic which suddenly assumed enormous proportions, lasted ten days only, and then disappeared.

Having regard to the heavy traffic on the railway and on the ordinary roads crossed by it, the large number of trains it was necessary to run and the arrangement necessary to ensure the proper check and collection of fares, the expenditure on construction and working could hardly have been reduced with safety, whilst it is difficult to see how a larger amount could have been earned.

It would perhaps have been better had the positions of the camp allowed of a main line (without branches) some 7 to 8 miles long being laid with the whole of the camps on either side of it, but the condition did not admit of such an arrangement.

LAHORE; The 7th March 1903.

H. A. L. HEPPER, Captain, R.E.,
Special Railway Officer, Delhi Coronation Durbar.

NOTE ON THE ACTIVITIES OF THE SUPPLY AND TRANSPORT CORPS IN CONNECION WITH THE LATE DELHI DURBAR.

The duties devolving upon the Supply and Transport Corps were onerous in the extreme, inasmuch as they had to collect supplies for about 60,000 men and 30,000 animals, to say nothing of the visitors residing in the several Civil camps, and when it is remembered that this meant about 17,000 tons of stores, the situation will perhaps be better understood.

2. The work was practically subdivided into two main headings—

I.—Military Camps, which generally drew their supplies under conditions similar to those adopted in field service; and

II.—Civil camps, which were supplied from a Central Market on cash payment.

3. As regards I, supply depôts were established at Mubarakpore and at Badli, from which the troops drew their supplies in a systematic manner; while for the meat-supply a large slaughter-house was erected at Badli, which turned out about 10 tons of meat per diem—during the Durbar period.

4. As regards the civil Camps, the Central Market was established upon the assumption that—

4,000 Europeans,
10,000 Natives,
6,000 animals,

would have to be provided for, and although this estimate was somewhat in excess of requirements in consequence of the competition of other agencies, yet on the whole it was not very wide of the mark.

5. Two systems were at work in respect to the market—

(a) one the sale of articles in Government stalls, such as meat, bread, fuel, fodder and grain, which were drawn from Government stocks; and

(b) the other in which certain tradesmen hired stalls at a fixed rate and sold their goods as they ordinarily do. In this way the following business were represented:—

I.—Wine and spirit merchants.
II.—Chemists and druggists.
III.—Drapers.
IV.—Fish and game salesmen.
V.—Vegetables and fruits salesmen.
VI.—Flower salesmen.
VII.—Restaurants for the natives of India, including both Hindus and Muhammadans.

6. About Rs. 90,000 was taken over at Government stalls, and although it could hardly be expected that tradesmen would give any idea as to the extent of their sales, it certainly did not fall below this amount.

7. Putting aside its general convenience to the Central and Visitors' Camps, the market exercised a most beneficial effect to the community at large, as it most effectually controlled prices in the city which otherwise would have been most exorbitant.

8. As it was, the city folk and traders generally tried to undersell it, thereby creating a competition most favourable to the general assembly. The rates were not high, all things considered, as is shown by the fact that after meeting the expenditure involved in its establishment and maintenance, the nett profit amount to about Rs. 1,000.

9. It was not the intention of Government by establishing the market to undersell or compete with local trade to any considerable extent, but chiefly for sanitary reasons it was deemed advisable to prevent an influx of townspeople to camps, and this was effected to an appreciable degree—the number of meat hawkers and others being decidedly less than might have been anticipated, apart from which, even they had to endeavour to work up to the standard of the market, which in itself ensured a clean and excellent supply under European supervision.

CALCUTTA: The 15th April 1903.

W. M. ALVES, Lieutenant,
for Director of Supply and Transport, Delhi Durbar.

No. 167-T., dated the 28th March 1903.

From—F. G. MACLEAN, ESQ., C.I.E., Director-General of Telegraphs,
To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Public Works Department.

WITH reference to your letter No. 232-C.W.—T., dated the 18th of February 1903, I have the honour to report, for the information of the Government of India, that while, as stated in my letter No. 30-A.T., dated the 12th February 1903, the estimated value of the special traffic earned by this Department in connection with the Delhi Durbar was Rs. 1,13,429, the actual revenue earned at Delhi was Rs. 1,23,202, excluding the revenue collected at other offices throughout India and Burma, on account of telegrams sent to Delhi. It may be interesting to point out that the number of paid telegrams sent from the Delhi offices for the period—1st November 1902 to 31st January 1903—numbered 67,710, whereas the number sent to the Delhi offices from elsewhere numbered 118,670, and that if this latter traffic be also credited to the Delhi Durbar, taking the average value of a paid telegram at 13·5 annas, a further sum of Rs. 1,00,000 should be added to the figures (Rs. 1,23,202) above, making a grand total of Rs 2,23,202. It is necessary, however, to state that it is unusual in calculations of this kind to take into consideration the value of received telegrams.

2. Other work done by the Telegraph Department in connection with the Delhi Durbar.—To meet the abnormal traffic which was anticipated in connection with the Durbar, the following measures were carried out:—

(i) Special additional telegraph circuits were arranged from Delhi to Bombay, Karachi, Sukkur, Lahore, Allahabad, Cawnpore and Calcutta, which involved the erection of 2,797 miles of extra telegraph wire for departmental purposes.

(ii) A large departmental telegraph office was established in the Central Camp, and it was placed in direct telegraphic communication with the Delhi Government Telegraph Office, the 10 local telegraph offices, and with all the principal telegraph offices in India.

(iii) Ten local telegraph offices were opened in the different camps enumerated in the margin, and necessitated the erection of 138·36 miles of extra telegraph wires.

(1) His Excellency the Viceroy's Camp.
(2) Consuls and Press Camp.
(3) Visitors' Camp No. 1.
(4) Badli Supply Depôt.
(5) Central Supply Depôt.
(6) Azadpur Military Camps.
(7) Bombay Chiefs.
(8) Central India Chiefs.
(9) Mysore Camp.
(10) Rajputana Chiefs.

(iv) An extensive Telephone Exchange system connecting the different camps, etc., was established.

(v) Additional railway, telegraph and telephone offices were opened, and 714·665 miles of extra telegraph wire erected for railway requirements as given below:—

Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway	...	...	100·545
North-Western Railway ...	...	...	324·85
East Indian Railway ...	...	..	130·62
Rajputana-Malwa Railway	...	...	139·17
Delhi Light Railway ...	...	...	19·48
	Total	...	714·665

(vi) For the Central Camp Telegraph Office and central telephone exchange a large brick structure, 160 feet in length, was constructed and supplied with electric light throughout. The staff attached to that office numbered about 300 men, and accommodation for them was provided to the rear of the office building in the camp, consisting of 160 field service tents which were arranged in eight sections, each section being complete with its own mess tent, cook-house, and staff of servants.

3. The two most important measures taken, and which I consider led to the disposal, in a highly satisfactory manner, of the unprecedented Press traffic, were (1) in arranging for the Delhi Central Camp Telegraph Office to be in direct telegraphic communication with all the principal telegraph stations in India, and (2) the extensive use of the Automatic system of transmission.

4. There were no less than 63 special Press correspondents (including nine for foreign Newspapers) at Delhi, who contributed messages regularly between the 29th December 1902 and the 13th January 1903, and the fact that all their requirements in regard to their telegraphic correspondence were satisfactorily met may be considered to be a very creditable achievement to the Telegraph Department.

5. His Excellency the Viceroy's Durbar speech of 1st January 1903 was telegraphed verbatim to the London Press, and is the first speech in the history of this Department ever so telegraphed.

DELHI DURBAR POSTAL ARRANGEMENTS.

The actual postal work in connection with the Durbar began on the 8th October 1902, when two temporary Camp Sub-Offices were opened for the convenience of the members of the Durbar Executive Committee and other officers who had come to arrange for the Durbar Camp. On the 3rd November 1902. Rai Daulat Ram Bahadur, C.I.E., took up his appointment as Chief Superintendent of Post Offices, Coronation Durbar.

2. The two temporary Camp Offices were abolished on the 20th November, and in their place the Coronation Durbar Head Office was opened with two subordinate post offices at the Punjab Chiefs' Camp and the Central Camp Railway Station. Between the 20th November and the 26th December, 16 additional post offices were opened for the Baroda and Mysore Camps, the Viceroy's Camp, the Bombay Chiefs' Camp, the Rajputana Chiefs' Camp, the Central India Chiefs' Camp, Visitors' Camp No. 1, the Madras Chiefs' Camp, the Commander-in-Chief's Camp, the Bombay Government Camp, the Punjab Government Camp, the North-West Frontier Camp, Visitors' Camp No. 2, the Viceroy's Escort Camp, the United Provinces Government Camp, the Bengal Government Camp and the Camp, of the Muhammadan Educational Confefence. At the same time the Delhi Head Office and its town sub-offices had their establishments increased in order to meet the fast-growing postal traffic.

3. On the 23rd December 8 Military Camp Post Offices were opened to serve the troops which had come in from the Manœuvres to join the Durbar Camp. These offices had been working during the Manœuvres almost exactly under field service rules, and to prevent confusion they were still styled "Field Post Offices." They were severally located at the Camps of the first Cavalry Division, the Mounted Infantry and Field Artillery, the Royal Horse Artillery, the Imperial Service Contingent, the Third and Fourth Infantry Brigades and Sappers, the Fifth and Sixth Infantry Brigades, the First and Second Infantry Brigades and the First and Second Infantry Divisions.

4. There were thus in all 27 Post Offices opened to serve the Delhi Durbar Camps with the following establisment:—

1 Chief Superintendent.
7 Superintendents.
5 Inspectors.
25 Postmasters of various grades.
181 Deputy Postmasters, Assistant Postmasters and clerks.
144 Postmen.
45 Packers.
30 Cycle and Orderly Peons.
12 Overseers.
73 Sweepers and other inferior servants.

The Railway Mail Service was also strengthened by the addition of—

5 Assistant Superintendents and
88 Sorters besides inferior establishments.

Twenty-one tongas supplied from the Simla-Kalka line were employed on the mail service at the Durbar and 80 tongas were furnished by the Post Office for the use of the Foreign and Press Camps.

The entire additional postal establishment for the Durbar consisted of 931 men.

5. The Coronation Durbar Head Office was held in a large masonry building specially erected for the purpose. The various Camp Offices in the Central Camp were in masonry Kiosks and most of the other Camp and Field Post Offices were in tents.

6. The Coronation Durbar Head Office comprised three offices. The first was the Head Office properly so called, the second was a Base Post Office for the 8 Field Post Offices, and the third was the Enquiry Office. The business of the Enquiry Office was generally to act as the brains of the Durbar postal system. It collected the names and addresses of the residents of and visitors to the various Camps and establishments connected with the Durbar assemblage, received all special instructions for delivery, and daily circulated the information thus obtained among the various departments of the Head Office proper. It also undertook deposit work and all the functions of the Enquiry Branch of a Dead Letter Office. In order to carry out the latter duty, it had attached to it clerks who were able to read almost all the Vernaculars of India from Burmese to Kashmiri besides Persian and other languages. The Enquiry Office, thus organized, had to deliver many thousands of letters very inadequately or wrongly addressed, and to undertake the task of redirecting the correspondence of the departing visitors. It was also in practice used by the general public as a guide to the Durbar Camp and its proceedings, and information of all kinds was largely sought for from it by all classes of the public at all hours.

7. Until the 17th December the Head Office made 4 deliveries daily and the outlying Camp Offices 2 deliveries. From the 18th December the deliveries were increased to 8 and 4, respectively beginning at 7-0 A.M. and ending at 6-0 P.M. Each official Camp was required by the Executive Committee to have attached to it an Enquiry Office, and in most cases the officer in charge of the Camp arranged that the postmen should leave all articles for delivery to the residents in the Camp with the Enquiry Office, the delivery to the individual residents being arranged for by himself. By this plan it was possible to keep down the staff of postmen to a minimum and to get through the deliveries more quickly than would otherwise have been feasible. There were over 80 pillar letter-boxes distributed throughout the Camp and clearances were made from 4 to 7 times a day by 20 cyclist peons.

8. It was not practicable to count the actual number of unregistered articles received and despatched, but it is estimated that the entire volume of extra unregistered correspondence delivered at Delhi on account of the Durbar approached 2½ million articles. The extra number of parcels, value-payable articles, and registered articles received was more than 76,000, and the extra number of money-orders issued was in round figures 28,000 for Rs. 6,68,500. The Comptroller's estimate of the total postal revenue atributable to the Durbar shows a considerable excess over all the additional expenditure incurred.

9. The organisation and supervision of all the postal arrangements were carried out by Mr. C. H. Harrison, Officiating Postmaster-General of the Punjab and North-West Frontier Province, up to the 12th November 1902, and from that date by Mr. C. Stewart Wilson, the permanent Postmaster-General.

SIMLA;

Offg. Director-General of the Post Office of India.

* * * * * * *

11. Visitors' Camps.—To supplement the hotel accommodation of Delhi, which is limited, arrangements were made for three Visitors' Camps—

No. 1, which was occupied chiefly by visitors from England, was located at Maiden's Hotel and in tents pitched on land adjacent to the hotel building. The number of visitors for whom arrangements were made was at first 150, but this number was subsequently increased. Applications for accommodation in this camp had to be made to the Military Secretary to the Viceroy.

No. 2 Camp, which was arranged for 200 visitors, was situated near the Mori Gate of the city, and was under the management of the Executive Committee, applications being dealt with by the Secretary.

In both these camps (No. 1 and No. 2) fully furnished tents fitted with boarded floors were provided, a staff of menial servants engaged, catering arrangements made at a fixed daily charge, and conveyances supplied to those who notified their wish to engage a vehicle for the fortnight. The articles provided in the tents comprised the usual camp furniture, including beds, mattresses and pillows, but not bed linen and towels. The residents of No. 1 Camp had their meals served in the dining-room of the hotel, and for the occupants of No. 2 Camp, as no large mess tents were obtainable, a temporary mess building was constructed containing dining- and drawing-rooms, a smoking-room, card-room, and cloak-rooms. The camps were opened on the 20th December 1902 and closed on the 18th January 1903. The actual numbers accommodated in each camp were—

	Europeans.	Servants.	Total.
No. 1	180	300	480
„ 2	191	306	497

Appendices Nos. 1 and 2 are copies of the notices relating to these camps which were sent to the applicants for accommodation.

In Camp No. 3, which was situated to the north of and close to the Central Camp, sites only were given to visitors who brought their own tents and made their own arrangements. An officer working under the Executive Committee had the ground marked off into convenient encamping sites and arranged for the water-supply and conservancy. The number of occupants of this camp was Europeans 355, servants 888; total 1,243.

Special officers were appointed to hold charge of each of these three Visitors' Camps during the period that they were open and to give the occupants all necessary information and assistance.

20. Railways.—The railway arrangements specially made for the Durbar Camps, in addition to the Light Railway, were as follows:—

A branch line was constructed from the Delhi-Umballa-Kalka Railway near the village of Azadpur up to the Durbar road, close to which was located the terminal station named the "Central Camp station." This branch line proved of the greatest value. The tent equipage and stores for the Central Camp and Military Camps situated east of Azadpur and most of the occupants of the Central Camp were conveyed by it, thus easing the city station of an enormous amount of traffic which, judging from the pressure experienced, the Railway authorities would hardly have been able to cope with satisfactorily.

A short length of line was also constructed taking off from the main line just north of the Cavalry Camp station to the Supply Depôt.

The following temporary stations were opened near the sites of the Provincial Camps and the Corps troops:—

(i) Cavalry Camp station on the Delhi-Umballa-Kalka Railway—a rail level passenger station.

(ii) Azadpur junction on the Delhi-Umballa-Kalka Railway which served the Punjab, Baluchistan, North-West Frontier Provinces, and Provincial Camps and the Imperial Service Troops.

(iii) Tannery station on the Southern Punjab Railway, which served the Bengal, Madras, Burma, Assam, Mysore, Baroda, United Provinces, Central Provinces, and Central India Provincial Camps. It was also used by the occupants of the Rajputana Provincial Camp who travelled to Delhi by the broad-gauge line.

(iv) West Camp station on the Rajputana-Malwa Railway close to the Tannery station, which was established for the convenience of the occupants of the camps just mentioned travelling by the narrow-gauge line.

(v) Rohilla Serai station on the Rajputana-Malwa Railway for the Rajputana Provincial Camp.

(vi) Selimgarh station on the East Indian Railway close to the fort to which special trains were run from the Central Camp station on the nights of the State Ball and Investiture.

In addition to these stations the Southern Punjab Railway authorities established a flag station on the main line about ½ mile from the United Provinces Camp for residents of the camps travelling to and from the city.

* * * * * * * *

25. Water-courses.—The number and lengths of the water-courses utilised by the camps is given in Appendix No. 3, the figures in which have been extracted from a statement furnished by the Executive Engineer, Delhi Division, Western Jumna Canal. From this table it will be seen that the total length of existing water-courses was 14·28 miles and of specially constructed extensions to these watercourses 20·75 miles.

* * * * * * * *

47. Accounts of Visitors' Camps No. 2 and No. 3 and of the Polo Club and ground.—Abstracts of the accounts of the Visitors' Camps Nos. 2 and 3 which were managed by the Executive Committee and of the Polo-ground are attached (Appendices No. 11 to No. 13) From these it will be seen that the receipts exceeded the expenditure as noted below:—

		Rs.	A.	P.
Visitors' Camp No. 2, balance credit	... ...	4,238	15	5
,, ,, ,, 3, ,, ,,	... ...	5	4	6
Polo Club and ground ,, ,,	... ...	902	4	8

These sums have been credited to Government. The balance credit of Visitors' Camp No. 2 is mainly due to the cost of the carriage of the tents supplied by the Ordnance Department, for which a provision of Rs. 4,000 had been made in the estimate of the camp expenditure having been included for convenience of account in the general charge against the Durbar grant.

The President, Marine Board, Port Adelaide, has given notice (No. 3 of 1903), informing Masters of Vessels, Pilots and others that during the construction of the training wall near the entrance to the Port Adelaide River, lights will be exhibited from the piles which have been erected as follows:—

An ordinary ship's riding light will be shown from the pile furthest to seaward, viz., abreast of the remains of the old pile lighthouse and two others at distances of about half a mile between each on the starboard hand from seaward. The outer one abreast of the old pile lighthouse, stands in about 12 feet and the other two in 6 feet and 3 feet respectively.

Four beacons for dredging marks will also be erected on the flats south and eastward of No. 1 leading beacons. These beacons will be surmounted by a head in the shape of the letter X. Narakal.

WITH reference to Notice to Mariners No. 136, dated the 25th April 1903, issued by this Office, the Presidency Port Officer, Madras, has given further notice (No. 28 of 1903) that the smoothest water will be found in 5½ fathoms L. W. S. T. soft mud on the following bearings magnetic, viz —

Mallipuram flagstaff	...	N. 80° E.
Narakal obelisk ...	...	N. 53° E.
Cochin lighthouse ...	...	S. 45° E.

2. Mariners are cautioned that the mud flats off Narakal have extended seaward.

3. Narakal flagstaff having been dismantled and removed, the light, bright, fixed, will in future be exhibited from the Mallipuram flagstaff.

4. In taking up an anchorage due consideration should be given to the state of the weather. The anchorage given is a good one for all weathers, but smoother water will be found still further north. Vessels wishing for a quick despatch may, during fine weather, approach nearer Cochin to enable boats to get to and from Cochin between Vypeen point and the sands, but in this position during a fresh breeze a short sea soon gets up making shipping operation difficult and causing damage to boats.

RESOLUTION ON THE REPORT ON THE WORKING OF THE EDEN SANITARIUM AND HOSPITAL FOR THE YEAR 1902.

MUNICIPAL DEPARTMENT—MEDICAL.

Darjeeling, the 18th June 1903.

RESOLUTION—No. 1240T.—M.

READ—

The Report on the working of the Eden Sanitarium and Hospital for the year 1902.

Read again—

The Report for the year 1901 and the Resolution recorded upon it.

The year's record shows that the Eden Sanitarium continues to maintain its popularity. The Hospital Section, which has been built and thoroughly equipped according to modern requirements, is an attractive feature of the institution, and many patients with serious disorders, who would not, but for it, have come to the Sanitarium, applied for admission and were successfully treated. No less than 134 cases were treated in the hospital during the year, and of these 14 were admitted during the winter months.

2. Notwithstanding the interruptions in railway communication with Darjeeling during the rainy season, which deterred many patients from coming to the hills, the total number of admissions to the Sanitarium during 1902 was 520, of whom 373 were patients and 147 relatives and friends. This, though less by 28 than the number admitted in 1901, was considerably above the average of previous years. The decrease was entirely in the number of first class patients, as the second class accommodation has been recently improved and has consequently become more popular. The daily average number of patients was 47·01 as compared with 32·75 in the previous year. In the majority of cases the diseases for which patients were admitted were, as usual, malarial fevers and debility, though a larger number of more serious diseases were under treatment than in the previous years. Of the 373 patients treated during the year, 326 were cured, 43 were relieved, and 4 died. The number of operations performed was 61, of which 60 were entirely and 1 partially successful. The free beds maintained for the benefit of convalescent patients from the Medical College and General Hospitals, Calcutta, were continuously occupied throughout the season.

3. The financial condition of the Sanitarium has not been altogether satisfactory, and Government has recently had to assist the Committee of Management with a grant of Rs. 5,000. The total income during the year under report was Rs. 38,481 compared with Rs. 37,466, the income of the previous year. The total expenditure, on the other hand, rose from Rs. 36,911 in 1901 to Rs. 44,695 in 1902. The expenditure thus exceeded the income by Rs. 6,214, and this excess the Committee were only able to meet with the aid of the grant from Government. The large expenditure during 1902 was chiefly due to the furnishing and fitting of the new hospital block. This item will not recur, and it is hoped that with a better season in prospect the institution will be able to pay its way during the current year, and that its financial embarrassments will prove to have been temporary only.

4. Major A. H. Nott, I.M.S., was in charge of the Sanitarium during the year, and it is due to his careful managenent and to the assistance received by him from the permanent staff that the efficiency and popularity of the institution have been maintained.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

L. P. SHIRRES,

Offg. Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE ROYAL BOTANIC GARDEN, CALCUTTA, FOR THE YEAR 1902-1903.

No. 1043T.—F., dated Darjeeling, the 18th June 1903.

From—L. P. SHIRRES, Esq., Offg. Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Financial Department,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture.

I AM directed to submit, for the information of the Government of India, a copy of the Report on the Royal Botanic Garden, Calcutta, for the year 1902-1903.

2. I am to say that the Lieutenant-Governor has expressed satisfaction at the excellent work done by Major D. Prain, I.M S., and his subordinates during the year.

No. $\frac{113}{46}$, dated Royal Botanic Garden, Sibpur, the 2nd May 1903.

From—MAJOR D PRAIN, M.B., I.M S., Superintendent, Royal Botanic Garden, Sibpur,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Financial Department.

I HAVE the honour to submit herewith the 116th Annual Report of the Royal Botanic Garden, Calcutta, for the year 1902-1903.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE ROYAL BOTANIC GARDEN, CALCUTTA, FOR THE YEAR 1902-1903.

THE principal outdoor work during 1902-1903 has been the deepening and widening of the ditch lying inside the northern and western garden boundary. The opportunity has been taken along with this work to improve the surface drainage of the adjacent portion of the garden and to fill up several unnecessary pits and ponds. The serviceable area of the garden has thus been considerably increased. The fern-house in the nursery, which had become dilapidated, has been overhauled and thoroughly repaired. The weather during the year was favourable to vegetation, and the show of orchids was particularly good.

2. Economic work.—As usual the attention of the garden staff has been almost exclusively devoted to the propagation, investigation, and interchange of plants of economic importance. A good deal of public interest has been shown in plants that yield fibre, and assistance has been freely given to enquirers for Rhea and for the fibre-yielding Agaves and Furcræas. An important question has been raised regarding the fibres vaguely classed as Indian Hemp; this can only be settled by cultivating and identifying the various plants. It appears that the expression "Indian Hemp" and its vernacular equivalent Çan do not exclusively connote Crotalaria juncea; further, it seems that this Crotalaria is not uniformly designated throughout India. The double confusion that results leads to trade difficulties; an attempt is being made to ascertain the actual facts and so remove these difficulties. Among other food plants the Indian Yams have received close attention during the year. The enquiry into this difficult subject, in which the Superintendent of the Garden and the Reporter on Economic Products are collaborating, has advanced considerably. Having regard to the fact that the East Indian Yams, with hardly an exception, are of very indifferent quality, some of the finest West Indian Yams have been introduced and are being experimentally cultivated. The difficulties that beset the propagation of Ipecacuanha having been largely overcome, samples of this drug have been submitted for examination and report to the Medical Storekeeper to Government, Calcutta. The fluctuating character of the Ipecacuanha market renders it desirable that, provided the drug is otherwise equally suitable, India should be able to depend, at least in part, on local supplies. An intelligent interest has been revived in the, as some believe, equally effective indigenous drug Rangan (Ixora coccinea, var. Bandhuca); arrangements have been made to propagate it largely and supply it freely to enquirers. During the year an attempt has been made to introduce some of the finer kinds of American pine apples, the ordinary Indian kinds being, as a rule, of the poorest description. An interesting introduction during the year has been the Japanese bamboo known as Mataké, which is employed by the inhabitants of the Province of Chiba in sinking their artesian wells. In the introduction of this bamboo, the garden is indebted to the kind assistance of Dr. Tokutaro Ito.

3. Herbarium.—The botanical explorations made during the year have included a visit by the Superintendent to the Sundribuns; a botanical tour by the Assistant Curator of the Garden in the North Lushai Hills and a systematic survey of the vegetation of Minbu, a district typical of the desert zone in Burma, by the Curator of the Herbarium. The Superintendent's tour has been possible owing to the help of J. H. Lace, Esq., Conservator of Forests, Bengal; the Lushai tour was arranged with the kind assistance of Major Shakespear, C.I.E.; the work in Burma, which was still in progress at the close of the year, was greatly facilitated by the aid of the local officers and particularly of Mr. L. Aubert, Superintendent of Land Records, Minbu. The Superintendent has for some years been engaged in preparing a review of the plants of Bengal, and their interest in the work has led to much valuable assistance being given by Mr. Lace, who has made and presented to the Herbarium a valuable collection of plants from Orissa; by Mr. H. H. Haines, Deputy Conservator of Forests, who has sent further collections from Singhbhum; and by Mr. F. A. Slacke, Commissioner of Chota Nagpur, who while on tour has very kindly supervised the work of a native collector in the Tributary States. The number of named specimens distributed to other Herbaria has been 10,888. The number received has been 14,920. The chief contributor for the year has been the University of Upsala, whence 2,758 specimens, mainly South American, and all of great value, have been received. Fine collections have been received also from Professor C. F. Baker, Stanford University, California, 873 specimens; Mons. E. Mouillefarine, Paris, 600 specimens; Lands Plantentuin, Buitenzorg, Java, 323 specimens. Smaller but very interesting collections have been contributed by the Director, Royal Gardens, Kew; Mons. Barbey, Geneva; Cantonal Museum, Fribourg; Hof-museum, Vienna; College of Agriculture, Montana; Botanic Gardens, Zurich; Botanic Gardens, Penang; Botanic Gardens, Singapore. Among Indian contributors have been Mrs. A. S. Bell, Banda, 578 specimens; J. H. Lace, Esq., 481 specimens; H. H. Haines, Esq., 206 specimens; Reporter on Economic Products, 190 specimens. Smaller collections have been contributed by the Conservator of Forests, Rangoon; Deputy Conservator, Port Blair; Lieutenant-Colonel J. J. Wood, I.M.S., Mr. W. H. Craddock, Forest Department, Burma; J. Marten, Esq., Forest Survey Department; Government Botanist, Madras, and others. Some specimens were also acquired by purchase.

4. Library.—A considerable number of additions have been made to the Library by exchange, presentation and purchase. The collection has now been completely re-arranged, and the scientific card catalogue giving both an authors' and a subject-index has been about half completed. Another large bookcase has been acquired during the year; this has partially relieved the congestion due to the growth of the collection, but other similar cases will require to be added for several years to come.

5. Interchange of seeds and plants.—The number of plants distributed during 1902-1903 was 37,368; the number received was 8,203. Among the plants received were some authentically named Agaves from Sir Thomas Hanbury, K.C.V.O., of La Mortola, Ventimiglia; a set of West Indian Yams from R. W. S. Mitchell, Esq., C.M.G.; a series of Travancore Yams from T. F. Bourdillon, Esq., F. L. S., Quilon; two interesting and valuable sets of Rhea roots from Mons. J. Karpelès, of the kinds grown in France and in Algeria. Donations of orchids of much interest were made by Captain Wood, R.E., from Burma; J. H. Lace, Esq., from the Sundribans; W. Goss, Esq., from the Duars. During the year 897 packets of seeds were received and 5,270 packets were distributed. Among the seeds received have been those of some very interesting species from German East Africa and from Madagascar, transmitted by the Agricultural Departments of these Colonies, also a number of extremely interesting species from Mexico, presented by J. C. Harvey, Esq., and from Ecuador, presented by Herr A. Rimbach.

In connection with this work of interchange assistance has been given to the Governments of Western Australia, Jamaica, Trinidad, British Guiana, and Ceylon, and to the British Protectorates in West Africa, in procuring representative collections of plants or seeds of staple Indian products; the Government of Siam has also been similarly aided.

6. Lloyd Botanic Garden.—This garden has been in a satisfactory condition throughout the year. In connection with the collection of alpine seeds, which forms a very important feature of the work of the garden, the Curator was able personally to visit the higher levels at the proper season, greatly to the benefit of the work in question.

7. The money allotted for contingencies for the Royal Botanic Garden, Calcutta, was spent in full. There was a slight saving of Rs. 39-9-11 under Establishment charges, and a saving of Rs. 284-3-6 under the allotment for travelling allowance. In the corresponding allotments for the Lloyd Botanic Garden there was a saving under contingencies of Rs. 442-10; under establishment of Rs. 1,900-9-2, and under travelling allowance of Rs. 67-11. The saving under establishment is explained by the fact that the present Curator is junior in the graded list of Gardeners to his predecessor. The revenues for the Royal Botanic Garden of Rs. 1,160-6, and for the Lloyd Botanic Garden of Rs. 1,133-7-6, have been paid into the treasuries at Calcutta and Darjeeling, respectively.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard, Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The direction and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground. Rainfall reported on any day is for 24 hours preceding 8 A.M. of that day.
